State Dept.'s New Loyalty Order Allows 7 to Resign

Position Reversed To Avoid Any Possible Injustice, It Is Explained

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

The State Department last night backed down on the firing without a trial of seven aides whose loyalty was said to be in question.

Now the seven are free to quit their jobs with nothing in the record against them—which is what they have been fighting for since July.

A department statement said this was allowed to avoid any possible injustice to the seven, and promised to see that from now on those who may be accused get the right to appeal to the Loyalty Review Board.

The statement also explained that "inasmuch as the only remedy presently available to them (that of obtaining clearance for employment elsewhere in the Federal Government) is not effective because they do not intend to seek such employment, the department has concluded that in order to avoid a possible injustice to them, they should be permitted to resign without prejudice."

Outline of Case

The department began "loyalty" sifts of its staff last summer, and in July fired 10 record clerks and radio editors. A week later, Secretary of State Marshall said there was evidence some of the 10 had indirect contacts with foreign agents.

Upon review, three of those fired were allowed to resign, but on the other seven the department stood pat, refusing to let them quit, to give them a trial or to tell them what they were charged with.

The seven said the department was giving them a bad name among those who might have hired them. Their lawyers, Thurman Arnold, former justice of the United States Court of Appeals here, former Interior Undersecretary Abe Fortas and former OPA Administrator Paul Porter, claimed the department was telling people it had a reasonable doubt that the seven were good security risks.

Change in Marshall Stand

Week before last, Secretary Marshall stood pat on the firings, saying the men could not be given hearings because they could not be told what they were charged with. They could not be told, he said, because the evidence was secret, and the secret was that of some other Government agency.

The next statement bearing on the case came from President Truman, who said last Saturday that he meant the civil rights of Government workers to be respected during the "loyalty" sifts.

The State Department's about-face yesterday was seen as a result of Mr. Truman's statement.

Farmers Object To Tax on Refunds By Cooperatives

Any attempt to tax as income true patronage refunds that co-ops make to members would be unconstitutional, Congress was told yesterday by Eugene L. Hensel, counsel for the National Association of Cooperatives.

Some businessmen have testified that money made by coops and distributed as patronage dividends to customers should be taxed as corporation income, in order to put these organizations on a footing with private businesses.

Hensel, appearing befre the House Ways and Means Committee, declared that farmers "will seek redress" in the Supreme Court if taxes are put upon farmer coops that do not "give full weight to the constitutional legal rules as well as the equitable economic rules."

The committee is reviewing the coops tax status as part of studies looking toward a general overhauling of tax laws.

D. C. Mother Arrives for Palace Party

By Lois Guerrieri

London, November 17.—My grandmother would shake her head if she knew where I am!

London was very bright when we flew in before noon today—I had expected to see some of the awful fog one hears so much about.

But we had it in Stephenville, Newfoundland!

The TWA crew on board the Constellation Star of Dublin treated me wonderfully and our weather was beautiful until just before we reached Stephenville.

Out over New York, the houses all looked like toys and the boats left little streams of white in the water.

We were hardly airborne when people began to get up and walk up and down the aisle. There were a lot of foreign people aboard; the man right next to me was from Egypt.

When we went into Stephenville my ears were hurting from the altitude, but Captain Elliott (Capt. Virgil Elliott, 3429 Valley dr., Alexandria, Va.) and the crew made a beautiful landing.

The stop was for refueling—but I needed no refueling. I just sat there making notes.

It was raining and cold. When I got out of the plane for a walk around the airfield, I saw no new long dresses and felt a little out of place in my own. I promptly put on slacks. Over the ocean and on toward Shannon, Ireland, I talked to everyone so much I'm hoarse and even my lips are chapped.

This flying is all so new to me, even describing my sensations is beyond me. We were almost three miles high and going 290 miles an hour in some stretches! The ocean was so far down one could hardly tell whether it was water.

I had no feeling of moving through air that fast. We could barely hear the four engines and

$1,970,253 Raised, Workers Report, With Week to Go

The Community Chest Federation fund-raising campaign reached the half-way mark yesterday with 50.5 per cent of the $3,900,000 quota subscribed.

Contributions and pledges of $56,540 were announced at the fourth of eight report luncheons bringing to $1,970,253 the total sum raised in the campaign.

Not included in yesterday's announcement were results of the weekend drive by residential and county units to boost the number of contributors. These results will be announced at today's report luncheon at 12:15 p. m. at the Chamber of Commerce.

"The campaign will not be complete until every resident of the Washington area capable of making a donation has been asked to give," Campaign Chairman Edward H. Foley, jr., told workers at yesterday's "dutch treat" luncheon at the Chamber of Commerce.

Foley said that Cleveland, Ohio, with a population less than that of Washington, had gone over the top in its campaign to raise five million dollars.

"If Cleveland can raise five million dollars, we should be able to reach $3,900,000," Foley declared.

He announced the campaign is further along than at the same period last year, but warned fund solicitors they have only a week to meet their quotas. The campaign closes next Tuesday with a "victory meeting" at the Mayflower Hotel.

Today's report meeting has been declared "past presidents' and cam-

Tells of Fuse Box Profits

War-Fattened Firm Belonged To Meyers, 'Front Man' Asserts

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers, wartime AAF materiel chief, was the real owner of an aircraft parts plant which reaped golden profits in 1941 on a contract with Bell Aircraft Co., the Senate War Investigating Committee was told yesterday.

Bleriot A. LaMarre, 35-year-old president of Aviation Electric Co., Dayton, Ohio, told the committee the company began to show profits when Meyers ordered him to raise from $11 to $44.58 the price of fuse boxes it made under Bell's contract with the United States Government.

LaMarre said he was actually a $51.50-a-week front man for Meyers and although the company books showed his salary in 1941 at $31,000, he kicked back $28,000 of that to the war contracting general.

Recommended, Bell Says

Lawrence D. Bell, president of Bell Aircraft, previously had told the committee that Meyers had recommended the Aviation Electric Co. to him while he was doing business with Meyers at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio. Throughout the war years, Bell said, he had 14 subcontracts with Aviation Electric Co. totaling about $1,053,000.

While Meyers was the second ranking officer in the entire AAF procurement branch during the war, Bell saw him about once a month on Bell's contracts with the Air Forces, Bell said.

After LaMarre, thin, blond, and wavy-haired, had finished his testimony and the hearing was recessed, Meyers called a press conference.

"Explains" to Press

He said he wanted to explain that some of his wartime financial involvements were due to his extra-marital affairs, which he described. The wartime major general, now retired, said he had had "personal involvements" all of his life.

As a parting shot, the stocky, cigar-chewing general, who was being advised throughout his extraordinary press conference by his attorney, John Amen, former Brooklyn prosecutor, said he knew "a lot of things about a lot of people" and was going to tell them all before he got through.

Meyers' original testimony on the witness stand already has brought the names of such people as former Treasury Secretary Morgenthau, Marriner S. Eccles, Lieut. Gen. Ira Eaker, Gen. H. H. Arnold, and others into these hearings. Most of those mentioned have promptly branded Meyers a "liar." One witness attacked by Meyers, Neil McCarthy, Los Angeles attorney, called Meyers' statements "desperately and wildly false."

Admits Tax Inquiry

The retired major general acknowledged to reporters that the Treasury Department has launched an inquiry into his income tax returns as a result of the committee investigation of his wartime activities.

So far as he knew, he said, the Justice Department has not yet started putting any evidence concerning him before a grand jury. If the Justice Department is investigating him, he declared, he is not aware of it. Justice officials have disclosed they have been looking into his activities.

LaMarre's testimony, documented every step of the way with records, canceled checks and photostats showed an involved financial manipulation with faked company minutes and a desperate order

Paris Control Assumed by De Gaullists

French Reds Assail United States as More Workers Strike

Paris, Nov. 17 (AP).—Gen. Charles de Gaulle's Rally of the French People (RPF) assumed control of the Paris municipal government tonight at a stormy city council session punctuated by Communist denunciations of the United States.

Meanwhile, Paul Reynaud worked to establish a new French national regime strong enough to resist opposition from both the Communists and the De Gaullists. Spreading unrest crippled large sections of France.

Pierre de Gaulle, the general's brother, was elected president of the Paris council—a post corresponding to the office of mayor—and 25 Communists walked out of the chambers amid catcalls and boos.

United States Assistance Assailed

Interrupted by cries of "Back to Moscow," Communist leader Raymond Boussus said members of his party would not sit in the same council with "Vichyites, . . . collaborators" and "apprentice dictators."

He declared the Socialists as well as the De Gaullists represented the United States in a campaign to "enslave the world" and claimed:

U.N. Approval Expected

United States, Russia Agree On Palestine Partition Oct. 1

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

Lake Success, N. Y., Nov. 17.—The United States and Russia today hammered out a final compromise decision for creation of independent Jewish and Arab states from a partitioned Palestine by next October 1.

The 26-year-old mandate is to end by next August 1 when approximately 80,000 British troops are to complete evacuation from the tumultuous Holy Land.

Delegates felt jubilantly certain that the plan would be approved by a majority of the 57-nation Palestine committee, with opposition coming from all the Moslem states.

Today's decision, reached with the aid of Canada and Guatemala, capped more than two weeks of discussions during which the American and Soviet delegates demonstrated cooperation seldom seen on other matters.

The biggest stumbling block to the final agreement was in American efforts to prevent the United Nations commission, which will set up the interim government, from being hampered by Russian Security Council vetoes.

Herschel Johnson of the United States and Semyon Tsarapkin of Russia accepted a plan which gives the Security Council control but prevents the veto from affecting its work.

The commission, to be made of representatives from five nations, is to be guided in its actions by recommendations by the General Assembly and by "such instructions as the Security Council may consider it necessary to issue."

The council instructions would be made by a vote of 7 of the 11 members. If one of the big-five nations vetoes the instructions, the commission will simply continue functioning with its original instructions from the Assembly.

Previous agreements reached by the two countries were torn apart by the British announcement that it planned to take its troops out of Palesine by August 1 and would not be responsible for government in the entire country when the withdrawal starts. Civil administration would be continued only in areas where British troops remain during the evacuation.

The plan reached today gives the U. N. Commission sufficient power to appoint provisional councils in each of the nascent states. These councils will move into areas vacated by the British with a local government and an armed militia. The British are not to issue any

Harriman Asks Law Change

End of Racial Segregation At Airport Is Sought by U. S.

A move to take the Federal Government out of the embarrassing necessity of enforcing racial segregation at the National Airport was launched yesterday.

Proposed legislation was submitted to Congress by the Commerce Department, which would cancel out of the law governing the airport portions of the Virginia Code applying to racial segregation at the airport.

The proposal, which came from Secretary of Commerce Harriman, was referred to the House District Committee. It is expected to bring a storm of protest from Southern Congressmen.

Harriman's letter to the Speaker of the House, which accompanied the proposal, declared:

"The Department of Commerce is placed in the position of requiring the segregation of white and colored persons at one of the world's finest airports operated by the Government and serving the National Capital.

"This, I believe, is contrary to the policy of the Federal Government. Due to these provisions of law, the numerous complaints received by the President and by this department must be answered with the statement that the concessionnaire is complying with the Federal statutes in segregating races at the airport and that the President and this department are powerless to direct otherwise."

Harriman's letter explained that this situation developed upon passage of the District-Virginia bound-

GOP Candidate Warns People of Vast New Army Of Prying Agents

Senator Taft (R., Ohio), last night denounced as "a step toward a completely totalitarian Nation," President Truman's proposal for a revival of partial wage, price and rationing controls.

Taft, candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, took to the radio after Mr. Truman offered his proposals to Congress at an extraordinary session.

"Reaction," cried Taft of the President's price and wage suggestions. He said the President wants to "turn the clock backward" and is advocating a return to the days of war, of the OPA, the War Labor Board and the War Production Board.

Of Mr. Truman's price-wage proposals, the Senator said:

"He wants price control against the producer, wage control against the working man, rationing against the housewife and the restaurant, every kind of control over the businessman.

Army of Prying Agents

"It means the setting up of a Federal bureau with literally hundreds of thousands of employes, and agents prying into the daily lives of millions of people.

"We know this is what it would mean because we saw it happen here. Such a proposal is not progress, nor is it liberalism. It is reaction and a step to a completely totalitarian nation."

Nothing that Mr. Truman had asked authority to institute a selective form of controls over items entering directly into the cost of living, Taft asked:

"Who is to determine what are vital commodities and whether they affect the cost of living? That definition alone includes 90 per cent of all commodities. No—the President is only trying to sugar-coat the pill. This is the OPA.

"Police State" He Condemned

"This is the police State condemned by the President himself only a month ago.

"There is the end of economic freedom."

(Responding to questions at his news conference October 16, Mr. Truman said controls ,including those over rents, represent police State methods even in wartime.

(He went on to say that such methods sometimes must be used in an emergency and that they are used in this country through the will of the people rather than that of one man.)

Taft said that "police state" methods choke production "and what we want is more production to give people what they need at reasonable prices."

Vanished from Market

He said that under OPA important items—he cited butter, meat, soap, canned goods, lumber, white shirts—disappeared from the market and that the same thing could happen all over again.

Taft held up England as an example of what could happen here and said:

Many Imports Cut 50%

U. S. Lowers Tariff Duties Near 1913 Level in Trade Pact

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

The widest tariff reductions ever made by the United States at a single time were announced by the State Department last night.

Duties on major American imports from Europe and the British Dominions were slashed in many cases to the full 50 per cent permitted by law.

At the same time foreign countries lowered their duties on a vast range of American products. The foreign concessions will have little or no effect for some time because of import restrictions imposed by dollar-starved countries abroad.

The American concessions, however, will go into effect on January 1 with the United Kingdom, Australia, Canada, France and the Belgium-Netherlands-Luxembourg customs union; and these countries, theoretically, will lower their duties on the same date, although their dollar shortages will keep out all but the most essential American exports.

The American reductions, agreed upon after long negotiations with 14 other countries at Geneva, will bring the American structure of customs duties almost down to the level of the Underwood Tariff of 1913, the lowest tariff act of modern times.

For many dollar-hungry countries the lower duties are expected to be a means of earning more dollars from sales to this country, depending on the speed with which they can revive their export industries.

Canada, for example, is so short of dollars that the Export-Import Bank yesterday extended her a three- to five-year loan of 300 million dollars for buying equipment and raw materials here.

The new tariff agreement, however, gives Canada new and important opportunities to sell some of her major products here. In addition to wood pulp and newsprint, already on the free list, the American duty on softwood lumber was cut 50 per cent, on crude aluminum by 33 1/3 per cent, and the duty on red cedar shingles, important in building, was abolished altogether.

The hard-pressed United Kingdom, too, is expected to benefit through the slashing of tariff rates on major British products. The duty on whisky—an item which accounted for 44 million dollars worth of imports from all sources into the United States last year—was cut by 50 per cent, from $2.50 to 1.50 a gallon.

Wage Controls Would Apply Only in Case Of Price Ceilings

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

If Congress should grant President Truman's request for restoration of price control and rationing authority, those controls would be applied in the first instance only to meat, Federal economic advisers indicated yesterday.

At a later date, depending on weather and other conditions, the controls might be invoked also for butter, and possibly poultry and wheat, these sources suggested. But they were convinced that there is no intention, or need, to apply them to other commodities such as clothing, other raw materials and industrial products.

Only in Case of Price Ceilings

The call for wage ceilings, which the President linked with his request for price control authority, clearly contemplates fixing pay only for those commodities to which price ceilings were applied, it was learned.

It thus appeared that for practical purposes, there would be little fixing of wages. For the commodities to be controlled are exclusively agricultural. In these cases, wages are a smaller factor than in industrial products. Furthermore, there are few concrete wage patterns which could be controlled, since farm wages are rarely set by union-management contracts.

The eight other aspects of the President's 10-point anti-inflation program, interviews with Administration economic advisers disclosed, call for some rather far-reaching legislative changes.

An outline of some of the laws which Mr. Truman and his aides appear to have in mind is presented below, in expansion of the points which the President mentioned

D. C. Rent Law Extension Seen From Message

President's Program Could Set Pattern Here, Legislators Believe

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

District leaders at the Capitol predicted last night that Congress' response to President Truman's call for longer and stronger rent control nationally will set the pattern for extending the District's separate rent-control law.

National rent control with its provisions for voluntary rent increases goes off the law books February 29. District rent control, a straight extension of the war-time law, goes out March 31.

To Postpone D. C. Measures

Capitol District leaders said they would probably wait until the regular session in January to tackle the District rent-control extension. They had given the local law an extra month to run to allow time for review in the regular session. They now want, too, to see first what Congress decides about the national law.

Along with District rent control, all other District legislation will be left to the reguar session, unless there is a new emergency to handle.

This was the policy announced yesterday by Senator C. Douglas Buck (R., Del.), chairman of the Senate District Committee, and Representative Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.), chairman of the House District Committee.

Cogswell Sees Year's Extension

Dirksen announced the plan to postpone District business until January after talking by phone to Commissioner John Russell Young.

Commissioner Young raised a question about taking up the current dispute over control of non-military activities and revenue from them at the District armory. Dirksen said that question, too, could wait until January.

Dirksen said postponing District

10-Step Program Given Congress; Aid Approval Seen Assured

(Text on Page 4)

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday asked authority to order consumer rationing of goods in short supply and selective price and wage controls as part of an all out attack on inflation.

In a personally delivered message to the summoned back Eightieth Congress, he renewed his call for 597 million dollars in interim aid to Italy, France and Austria.

Then he laid down a 10-point anti-inflation program to check runaway prices. He told a joint meeting of the two Houses an "alarming degree of inflation" threatens our entire foreign aid program.

"We cannot abandon foreign aid, nor can we abandon our own people to the ravages of unchecked inflation," he said.

Applaud Air Portion

Senators and House members, who had convened only 90 minutes before in back-slapping good humor, applauded the foreign aid start of his speech. Interim aid clearance on schedule is taken for granted.

But applause stopped and Republican legislators registered shock as the President unfolded his comprehensive program for meeting the price rise. They had expected a "mild" program, at the most credit and allocation controls.

The President frankly said some of his proposals were drastic. He asked Congress to proceed with three types of measures.

The first group, designed to relieve monetary pressures, would:

Restore consumer credit controls and check inflationary bank credit.

Would Regulate Trading

Authorize regulation of speculative trading on the commodity exchanges.

The second bloc of measures, designed to channel scarce goods into the most essential uses, would:

Extend and strengthen export controls.

Extend authority to allocate transportation facilities and equipment.

Authorize steps to induce marketing of livestock and poultry "at weights and grades that represent the most efficient utilization of grain."

Expand the Agriculture Department program of conservation practices, and step up food production in foreign countries.

Ration Power Asked

The surprise came in a third group of measures dealing with specific high prices. The President, as expected, asked extension of rent control, but in addition:

Authority to ration basic cost of living items on a highly selective basis.

Power to impose price ceilings on goods in short supply, which basically affect living costs or production.

Authority to order "such wage ceilings as are essential to maintain the necessary price ceilings."

Relatively Few Spots

What he proposed, he told Congress, was selective treatment of a relatively few danger spots as short-range insurance against "economic catastrophe." He said this is very different from "over-all wartime price controls." For example, he said, price ceilings would not be necessary for food and clothing items not in short supply or for any delicacies or luxuries.

He assured members consumer rationing and price ceilings would not be used in any case if voluntary methods halt the price rise. What he was asking, he said, was an "economic preparedness measure," adding:

"If we fail to prepare and disaster results from our unpreparedness, we will have gambled with our national safety—and lost."

If price ceilings are imposed in any field, he said the Government

Russians Have 14,000 Planes, 3 Times Ours, Spaatz Says

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Gen. Carl Spaatz, Air Force chief of staff, yesterday estimated Russian air power at 14,000 first-line combat planes—more than three times the present United States total—and called for a substantial boost in American air strength.

Presenting a six-point program to bolster our air defenses, Spaatz said that at present we are in an "insecure position."

He told President Truman's Air Policy Commission that at the "barest minimum" we must have some 7000 first-line combat airplanes, backed by adequate reserves, research, and aircraft production.

The Air Force chief told the group there is good evidence the Russians are building B-29-type strategic bombers. And after testifying, he revealed to reporters that more than 100 jet bombers of different types were flown over Moscow during a recent demonstration.

Asked how many long-range bombers the Soviets have, General Spaatz said he did not know. But he "guessed" they could produce 500 to 1000 of the craft in 6 months if they wanted to.

The top air chief said he could make no comparison between the Russian and American air forces as to the quality of warplanes. But the known superiority of at in 1943 to eliminate Meyers' name from every company record.

So far as profits go, the committee had time only to go through the records for 1941. LaMarre will return to the stand today. In that year the company did a total volume of business of $164,327. Of this total, the Bell subcontract accounted for $162,918.62 of the business.

After Meyers' order upping the price to Bell of parts to go into AAF planes, the company paid Meyers back an initial $35,000 investment. In addition, LaMarre said, Meyers received checks totaling about $28,000.

LaMarre said he had met Meyers at Wright Field through his wife, who was Meyers' secretary.

Meyers Got Him a Job

In 1939, he declared, he was out of a job and Meyers got him one with the Douglas Aircraft in March, 1939, at a salary of $35 a week. His wife, a Civil Service employe, got a transfer and joined him in Santa Monica, Calif., in June of that year, he said.

In November of 1939, General Meyers wrote him a letter LaMarre declared, asking him to come back to Dayton to take another job. Mrs. LaMarre was to receive her old job back.

Then in November or December Meyers flew to California in an Army plane and again asked LaMarre to take a job with him.

This time Meyers said he had invested money in a new company and wanted LaMarre, an accountant, to watch it.

Advised of Contacts

Meyers told him, he said, of contacts with North American, Bell and Curtiss-Wright companies. Finally, Mr. and Mrs. LaMarre decided the job offered good opportunities. They started motoring to Dayton, Ohio, ran out of money at Nashville, Tenn., and the general sent them $135.

Early in January, 1940, General Meyers sent for LaMarre to come to Patterson Field, at Dayton, so that books of the company be set up. There were a total of 250 shares of stock, LaMarre said, of which 224 were in the name of June Ballou, a Wright Field employe, one share in the name of David Johnson and 25 shares in the name of Robert L. Pine, a promoter.

Stock Transferred to Him

When he had his January conference at Patterson Field, LaMarre declared, 225 shares of the stock were transferred to him.

He paid no money, he said, because General Meyers was the real owner of the stock.

William P. Rogers, committee counsel, who was conducting the examination of LaMarre, asked:

"Then at all times you understood Meyers was the real owner of the company?"

"As far as the active operation of the company he was the owner," LaMarre replied, "but he didn't appear in the records as owner."

The books showed, LaMarre said, that Meyers put up the first $500 to start the company and later advanced another $500. He kept making advances to the company until he had $30,000 in it.

The witness identified the original journal entries set up in the books as being in Meyers' handwriting. They were dated as of September 25, 1939, he said, but were actually made at the time of the January conference.

The first journal entry showed that Meyers paid in a total $500 for 250 shares of the common stock of the company at $2 a share.

Money Advances Shown

Subcommittee chairman Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) queried,

"Then he was the real owner?"

"He was the boss and the real owner," replied LaMarre.

The articles of incorporation, LaBarre testified, originally bore the name of Bennett E. Meyers but he carefully x-ed out Meyers' name in 1943 at the request of the general.

LaBarre said he understood the general felt he could not afford to have his name connected with the company while he held a procurement office in the Army.

Subject to Two-Year Term

It has been pointed out several times during the hearings that Federal officials of any kind connected with Government procurement are subject to a two-year jail term if convicted of personal dealings with firms with which they are doing Government contracting.

At the January, 1940, session, LaBarre declared, the general dictated minutes—of a session never held—of a meeting of the stockholders naming LaMarre president.

Corporate resolutions were "passed", according to the fake minutes, naming LaMarre and Meyers as the two persons authorized to handle financial transactions for the company, LaMarre continued. Such corporate resolutions are required by banks to be filed by persons doing business under a company named.

Meyers kept the entire 225 shares of company stock in his possession al lthe time, LaMarre declared.

In November, 1940, just before Meyers got the Bell contract, he obtained the remaining 25 shares of stock from Pine, saying that he planned to sell the company. The stock was delivered to him, LaMarre said. Under questioning, he agreed that Meyers had paid nothing to get it back.

Authorizatio Changed

Some of the stacks of bank records and other documents introduced showed that the bank authorization for persons to draw checks on the company was changed in the war years from Meyers and June Ballou to LaMarre, T. E. Readnower, and R. A. Curnutt. Meyers identified Curnutt as his father-in-law. He told reporters he got Curnutt, when he was a prospective father-in-law, a $12,000 a year job with the company.

Meyers was married in 1943 to Ila Rae Cornutt, a $150-a-week Hollywood actress who divorced her first husband. Meyers' first marriage ended in divorce in 1927. His second, to the former Mary Jane Brownell, also ended in divorce in 1941. By his third marriage Meyers has twins, Arnold Ira and Damon.

LaMarre said the salary kickback was worked this way: He drew company checks to himself covering his supposed salary. Then he had cashier's checks made out and sent them to Meyers.

Photostats Introduced

Photostats of those checks made payable to B. E. Meyers, and indorsed to his account in the Riggs National Bank here, were introduced in evidence. Meyers has been insisting that LaMarre was only paying back a loan he had made him.

It was definitely Meyers, LaMarre said, who set prices on equipment furnished Bell. He had raised prices on other items as well as the fuse box after LaMarre had made estimates, the witness said. LaMarre indicated Bell had paid the much higher figures without complaint.

Col. Jacob L. Smart, whose initials were found on an FBI-referred complaint about Meyers to the Army Air Forces in 1945, told the committee he couldn't recall putting his initials on the complaint to bury it in the files. Smart, one-time former secretary to the Air Staff, said he supposed they were his initials. Anyway, he said, he'd probably do the same thing today because the Air Forces person who had made the complaint to the FBI hid not had "the intestinal fortitude" to sign his name.

Couldn't Recall Initialed Letter

COL. JACOB E. SMART told the Senate War Investigating Committee yesterday he had no recollection of ever having seen an anonymous letter accusing Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers of irregularities, although Smart's initials appear on the letter

Fairfax P-TA Indorses Va. Teacher Plan

A three-point legislation program to benefit Virginia teachers was indorsed last night by the Fairfax County Federation of Parent-Teachers Associations.

Prepared by the Virginia Education Association, the program will be presented to the Virginia Legislature at its next session.

Here are the proposals:

1. Installation of a Statewide minimum wage scale for teachers. Those holding master's degrees would receive a minimum of $2200, with a maximum of $3400 after 12 years' experience. Those with bachelor's degrees would receive a $2000 minimum, with annual $100 raises until they reach $3200 after 12 years. Teachers with the now absolete normal certificates would receive $2000 to $2800.

Retirement Allowance

2. Raising the maximum retirement allowance from $1000 to $1800 a year. The program would reduce from 65 to 60 the age at which teachers would be eligible for retirement. It recommended that the State reoffer membership in the retirement plan to teachers who refused to take part when it was first presented in 1942.

3. Granting of 10 days' sick leave annually to each teacher. Sick leave could be accumulated up to a total of 60 days.

The program was presented to 40 persons representing P-TAs from all parts of the county by Mrs. Katherine Hopper, president of the Fairfax County Education Association, at a meeting held at Fairfax Elementary School.

Woodson Statement

Superintendent of Schools W. T. Woodson said counties and cities in the State would not be bound by the proposed salary minimums, but could set them higher.

Woodson quoted figures for the current school year showing that of $1,054,490 to be paid to Fairfax County teachers this year, the State will contribute $356,350. He estimated that under the association's program, the State's contribution would be increased 10 to 20 per cent.

Lodge Schedules Dance

The Fellowcraft Club of Benjamin Franklin Lodge, No. 50, Free Ancient and Accepted Masons, will sponsor a cabaret dance for charity at 9 p. m. tomorrow at the Shoreham Hotel. All proceeds of the dance will be used to equip physical therapy rooms for the cerebral palsied children under the auspices of the D. C. Society for Crippled Children.

Rationing and Wage Powers Requested by President

"in all fairness" should have authority to prevent wage increases in the same field. But he said he believed "there would be few occasions for its use."

The complete silence that marked the price phase of his speech was followed by a polite round of applause as he concluded. Then Republicans opened fire on the 10-point program in a barrage of written statements terming it everything from a "super-colossal OPA" to a return to "police state" methods.

Billed to Start Tomorrow

Hearings on the President's price program are billed to start tomorrow before the Joint Congressional Economic Committee, with members of the Banking committees of the two Houses sitting in.

In originally scheduling the price hearing, Chairman Taft (R., Ohio), discussed only a five-point agenda: (1) Allocation of materials (2) extension of rent controls, (3) extension of export controls, (4) consumer credit controls and (5) control of speculation on commodity exchanges.

Work on the 597-million-dollar interim aid program recommended by Mr. Truman alrady is far advanced in House and Senate committees. Before the President spoke, the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee, meeting in executive session, agreed to start writing its own draft of an aid bill today. Carrying a GOP leadership "priority" rating, the bill will be sped to the Senate late this week, and floor debate will open Monday.

To Take Testimony

The House Foreign Affoirs Committee scheduled another day of hearings, to take tetsimony from world-girdling legislators, before starting to write an aid bill. The House group still hadn't decided whether to follow the Senate lead, and write a new bill or to amend the 332-million-dollar Foreign Relief Act of last year as a vehicle for the new program.

Gets Budget Estimates

Meanwhile, the House Appropriations Committee, which must clear the funds required, received detailed Budget Bureau estimates. Chairman John Taber (R., N. Y.), however, said he does not plan to hold hearings until Congress approves the aid authorization.

Every seat on the House floor was occupied and galleries were jammed when the President faced Congress at 1:30 p. m. Seated with the diplomatic corps to the President's right were representatives of the three nations who will receive stopgap help.

For Italy, the President asked 227 million dollars; for France, 328 million dollars, and for Austria, 42 million dollars. These amounts would provide food, fuel and other essential goods to carry all three through the winter until longdange (Marshall Plan) aid is made available March 31.

"The future of the free nations of Europe hangs in the balance, the President told Congress. He said interim aid will not solve Europe's problems, but will give it strength to carry on until longrange help arrives.

"If the Western European nations should collapse this winter, as a result of our failure to bridge the gap between their resources and their needs, there would be no chance for them—or for us—to look forward to thei reconomic recovery," he said.

Members applauded the President's every reference to "freedom-loving countries" and the goal of a free and self-supporting Western Europe.

His biggest hand came with one veiled reference to Russia. Mr. Truman did not mention Russia by name but spoke of "unwelcome obstacles" to peace and "the criticisms (of our methods) so loudly expressed." He said America "cannot afford, and we do not intend, to let current differences with some nations deter our efforts to cooperate in friendly fashion and to assist other nations who, like us, cherish freedom and seek to promote the peace and stability of the world."

Government Is Not Printing Ration Books

The Government is not printing ration books, A. E. Giegengack, the public printer, said against last night.

He was denying a rumor that pops up from time to time. Giegengack added that there is no authority or appropriation existing to print them, or to farm the job out.

He estimated that it would take three months to get started, if authority were granted.

Salesman Held For Grand Jury

Thomas F. O'Hara, 22, Baltimore book salesman, was yesterday held without bail for action of Prince Georges County grand jury, charged with assault with intent to rape a 24-year-old Morningside, Md., housewife.

The alleged attack occurred last Wednesday, police said, when the salesman reportedly dragged the woman from her kitchen to a bedroom. She escaped after an hour of struggling, she told police. O'Hara was arrested Wednesday night by County Detective John W. Siddall, who traced his activities through the Washington Better Business Bureau and the book concern.

Rough Road Is Seen For Price-Curb Plan

GOP Leaders See Effort to Revive OPA, Put U. S. on Path to Totalitarianism

President Truman's 10-point anti-inflation program yesterday surprised Congress and ran into almost solid Republican opposition.

Proposals for limited consumer rationing and price ceilings bore the brunt of the GOP attack.

While Democratic leaders talked softly, Republican helmsmen charged the President asked "dictatorial powers in peacetime," and a "super-collossal OPA."

Quotes Him on "Police State"

Republican National Chairman Carroll Reese accused Mr. Truman of proposing the same sort of "police state" he recently denounced.

Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., (R., Mass.) and House Republican Leader Charles W. Halleck (Ind.) led off the Capitol attack on the same theme.

In contrast, the President's plea for 597 million dollars in stop gap aid for Western Europe was favorably received, Republican leaders have sidetracked other measures to give it top priority.

Signals Rough Going

The drumfire attack on his price curb proposals signaled rough going for every one of the non-voluntary measures and probably set the theme of the 1948 campaign.

Democrats reacted with unusual caution. Mostly, they said it would require serious study and praised the President's "boldness" and "courage" in presenting it. Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.), Democratic national chairman, however, called it a clear-cut expression of the majority will.

After bitterly denouncing the program, Martin and Halleck implied the President didn't expect special session action.

Said Halleck: "He took off OPA just before the election. That raises the question of whether he really wants the drastic power he now asks."

Said Martin: "Having had service in the Senate, the President should know that he couldn't get measures so controversial and of such magnitude enacted in the space of time between now and the regular session."

Assailed by Byrd

Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.), who has been fighting Administration financial policies since the early days of the New Deal, served notice that he would oppose Mr. Truman down the line.

"The President has proposed the greatest economic regimentation of home affairs ever suggested in time of peace," Byrd said in a formal statement. "If such regimentation is once established, what assurance is there that it will not become permanent?"

Typical reaction in both the Senate and House follows:

Senator John W. Bricker (R., Ohio) a Taft supporter and the Republican vice presidential nominee in 1944—"I am opposed to restoration of controls . . . A few weeks ago the President himself opposed them as being the measures of a police state. His request today is evidently reversal of his position."

Chairman John Tabor (R., N. Y.) of the House Appropriations Committee—"The President didn't tell us what his 597 million dollars for foreign relief was for. It is presumptuous for any ordinary fellow to expect him to tell us. As for his inflation control recommendations, it almost seems as if he should set a good example before coming to us for legislation."

Not a Chance, Says Hoffman

Chairman Clare Hoffman (R., Mich.) of the House Executive Expenditures Committee—"There is absolutely no chance that Congress will approve consumer price and rationing controls . . . What I want to know is what's going to happen to our meat supply if we quit feeding grain to livestock?"

House Democratic Leader Sam Rayburn of Texas—"I hope we can approach the program swiftly as possible with as little political partisanship as possible."

Chairman Jesse P. Wolcott (R., Mich.) of the House Banking Committee—"He threw the book at us and we will take it up chapter by chapter."

Chairman Charles A. Eaton (R., N. J.), of the House Foreign Affairs Committee—"I am in agreement with the President's foreign aid program."

Representative George H. Bender (R., Ohio)—"This shows the direction in which Mr. Truman is moving—war. I don't intend in peacetime to vote for wartime controls on wages, prices and materials."

Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.), ranking Democrat on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee—"A thoughtful and comprehensive message . . . They (the legislative proposals) will require considerable time and attention by Congress before they can be solved."

Senate Republican Whip Kenneth S. Wherry of Nebsaska—"The President now seeks to hold over the people wartime controls in consideration for granting aid to European countries. Interim aid is being used as a guinea pig for the Marshall Plan."

Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.)—"It looks to me as if the Executive wants the same controls he had during the war . . . The message was theoretical, and what can be done in practice is a different thing."

Prefers Spending Cut

Chairman Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.), of the Senate Finance Committee—"I'm sorry the President didn't propose a reduction in government spending equal to his foreign aid expenditures."

Senator John Sparkman (D., Ala.)—"It was a courageous and positive program. It left the problem right in the lap of Congress."

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney. (D., Wyo.), former chairman of the Joint Congressional Economic Committee—"Nobody can now misunderstand the gravity of the situation."

Senator Ralph E. Flanders, (R., Vt.), who recently led Senate investigators in an on-the-spot study of prices in leading cities—"I think the President put a lot more in our laps than we can hold."

Read It in CIO News

Senator Joseph H. Ball, (R., Minn.)—"I read the whole program last week in the CIO News (official publication of the Congress for Industrial Organizations). Apparently the President wants us to liquidate freedom in America in the name of saving it abroad."

Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.)—"A comprehensive and challenging program. I am going to give it my whole-hearted support."

Senator W. Lee O'Daniel (D., Tex.)—"The President's message, which I cannot believe is his own brainchild, recommends radical communistic opiates as a cure for the dire consequences of 14 years of New Deal delirium tremens."

Senator Wayne L. Morse (R., Oreg.) leader of the so-called GOP liberal bloc—"A vigorous statement of the issues. I shall be open-minded on the methods of accomplishment for the present."

Premier Says Reds Forget To Be Italian

Rome, Nov. 17 (AP).—Premier De Gasperi replied today to a Communist accusation that his government is toadying to the United States with an assertion that the Communists had "forgotten to be, before all, Italian," the news agency Ansa said.

Referring to leftist-led disorders which have rocked Italy for a week, De Gasperie said, "The government will not excuse, and will not be weak."

Violence ebbed today. An agricultural strike was in progress in southern Italy, but was orderly.

Russia Bars Arms Treaty For Germany

London, Nov. 17 (U.P.).—Russia today vetoed a United States-British-French attempt to get the proposed American 40-year treaty to enforce German disarmament on the program for the Big Four foreign ministers' conference, opening here November 25.

Russia Delegate Andrei A. Smirnov, at a meeting of Big Four deputies, persistently rejected all attempts to include consideration of the proposal in the agenda.

Smirnov asked the American attitude on amendments which Russia offered at the Moscow Big Four conference—amendments regarded by the United States merely as a sabotage attempt.

Told the American attitude had not changed, he said, "You are asking us to buy a cat in a bag."

Ex-Manager Indicted in Fund Shortage

Carl Roper, 37, of 11 Ridge rd. se., former manager of the Safeway store in Rockville, was indicted yesterday on a charge of embezzling $6294 from the Rockville grocery last May.

The indictment was one of 46 returned by the November grand jury of Montgomery County Circuit Court. The jury ignored 12 other cases.

An indictment on five counts of forgery and one of false pretense was returned against Mrs. Edith Sarah Allen, 25, of 2700 Webster st., Mount Rainier, Md. Police said Mrs. Allen, mother of two children, who already faced bad check charges in Prince Georges and the District, allegedly wrote four bad checks totaling $186.20 prior to her arrest in September.

The grand jury included 13 women among its 23 members, the first women to serve on a Montgomery County panel. Yesterday's indictments were their first.

Joseph A. Wagstaff, jr., 23, of 5506 Grove st., Chevy Chase, was indicted on a charge of malicious destruction of property. Police said Wagstaff broke into the home of a neighbor September 19 in the belief it was his own. He has since been taking psychiatric treatment, according to his family.

Two true bills were returned on charges of murder, one of them against Wilbert H. Brown, 34, of Germantown, Md., who is charged in the fatal shooting of George Moore, 24, of Clarksburg, Md., June 14. Chief Judge Charles W. Woodward of the Circuit Court withheld details of the other murder indictment since the defendant has not been apprehended.

Indicted in Auto Fires

Two indictments were returned against John W. Kaiser, 20, of 9200 Old Bladensburg rd., on charges of tampering with and maliciously burning an automobile. Currently confined in the District Training School as a mental defective, Kaiser was arrested May 21. Police said he set fire to three automobiles in Takoma Park with a cigarette lighter.

Richard Wayne, of near Rockville, was indicted on a charge of cruelty to animals. He is charged with starving a horse to death.

The jury recommended greater fire protection at the County Alms House, Foreman Andrew J. Kessinger explaining the jury found a lock on fire escapes and a need for more hasty means of exit for the aged and infirm residents.

business was based on hopes of House leaders to reserve all the time of the special session for action on President Truman's program and not to divert "interest and attention" to other legislation.

After hearing the President's speech, Representative Dirksen left the way open to act in the special session on the District rent-control question, but made no promise that there will be action before January.

District Rent Administrator Robert F. Cogswell said "the situation now seems to demand another year of rent control in the District."

Cogswell said he favored a flat extension of the present law.

Cogswell estimated that the average rent increase in large apartment buildings here this year has been about 8 per cent, but he emphasized that it was an increase over the rent levels of 1941.

He said rents in the District had not climbed so fast as they have nationally. He attributed this to the extension of the District's wartime rent controls.

Cogswell said the shortage of homes and apartments in Washington is still "very acute." He said the demand for rooms had dropped after Congress went home, but predicted the demand would increase now. He said demands for transient rooms had been very heavy for the past two or three weeks.

Deer Joins Cattle

Milwaukee (U.P.).—William Tiegs, who lives in the Milwaukee outskirts, reports a deer has joined the cattle in his cow pasture and seems so contented it is remaining.

Free Postage Asked for Food Mailed Abroad

Representative August H. Andresen (R., Minn.) introduced a bill yesterday to provide free postage on private shipments of food, clothing and other gifts to countries covered by the European aid program.

The Postoffice Department would be reimbursed for postage by the Federal agency handling the aid program. It would cover only nations included in any program finally approved by Congress.

Other bills introduced:

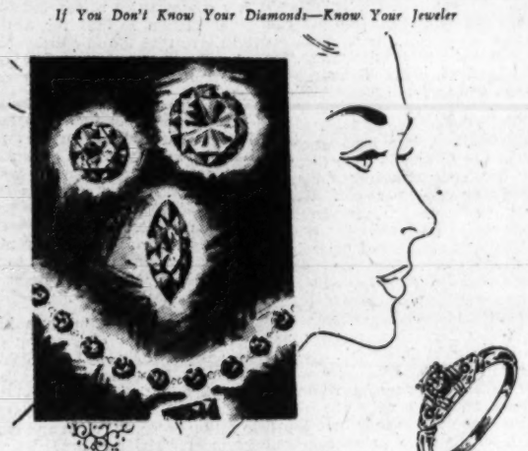

Representative Ellsworth B. Buck (R., N. Y.)—To repeal all oleomargarine taxes except a one-fourth cent a pound levy.

Representative Thomas A. Jenkins (R., Ohio)—To increase veterans pensions for nonservice connected disabilities from $50 to $75 a month.

Representative George A. Smathers (D., Fla.)—To bolster the Federal Housing Administration's authority to insure new home construction loans.

The Administration would be permitted to insure loans up to $5,200,000,000. The present legal limit is four billion dollars. The agency halted action on principal types of home loans last week when it reached the dollar limit set on its coverage in earlier legislation.

Text of President Truman's Message to Congress on Aid, Inflation

MR. PRESIDENT, Mr. Speaker, Members of the Eightieth Congress:

The Congress has been convened to consider two problems of major concern to the citizens of the United States and to the peoples of the world. The future of the free nations of Europe hangs in the balance. The future of our own economy is in jeopardy.

The action which you take will be written large in the history of this Nation and of the world.

The Secretary of State and other representatives of the executive branch have appeared before committees of the Congress during the past week to present the facts regarding the necessity for immediate assistance by the United States to certain European countries. Austria, France and Italy have nearly exhausted their financial resources. They must be helped if their peoples are to survive the coming winter, and if their political and economic systems are not to disintegrate.

Exceedingly bad weather has brought on crop failures and fuel shortages and has caused intense suffering. The food and fuel stocks of these countries are now near the vanishing point. Their peoples are in a dangerously weakened position, due to years of short rations. Additional medical supplies and facilities are urgently necessary.

Austria needs 42 million dollars, Italy needs 227 million dollars and France needs 328 million dollars to buy food, fuel and other essential goods during the next 4½ months.

Detailed information has been presented to your committees concerning these needs and the purposes for which funds to be appropriated by the Congress would be spent.

Additional funds will also be required to maintain our position in occupied areas.

Emergency assistance by itself will not solve European problems. Emergency aid is no substitute for a long-range recovery program, but it is a vital prerequisite to such a program.

If the western European nations should collapse this winter, as a result of our failure to bridge the gap between their resources and their needs, there would be no chance for them—or for us—to look forward to their economic recovery. The providing of interim aid will give us time to plan our part in an economic recovery program and it will give the peoples of Europe the strength to hold out until such a program begins.

I shall shortly submit to the Congress my recommendations concerning the long-range European recovery program. This program is the result of the combined efforts of thoughtful men of two continents whose concern has been the most effective manner in which 16 European nations, western Germany and the United States can work together for European recovery, world prosperity and lasting peace.

PRESIDENT TRUMAN
Addressing Joint Session

IT IS a tribute to the strength of our democracy that we are able to make so great a contribution to the freedom and welfare of other nations and other peoples. This Nation is strong both in material resources and in the spirit of its people.

Our economic strength, born of our system of free institutions, has contributed to raising the standard of living the world over. Our moral strength, resulting from our faith in human rights, is the inspiration of free men everywhere.

I refer to the strength of this Nation with humility, for it is an awe-inspiring truth that the manner in which we exert our strength now, and in the future, will have a decisive effect on the course of civilization.

This is a truth whose significance grows with the experience of each passing day. The American people are becoming more and more deeply aware of their world position. They are learning that great responsibility goes with great power.

Our people know that our influence in the world gives us an opportunity—unmatched in history—to conduct ourselves in such a manner that men and women of all the world can move out of the shadows of fear and war into the light of freedom and peace.

We must make the most of that opportunity.

For we have learned, by the costly lesson of two world wars, that what happens beyond our shores determines how we live our own lives. We have learned that, if we want to live in freedom and security, we must work with all the world for freedom and security.

Human misery and chaos lead to strife and conquest.

Hunger and poverty tempt the strong to prey upon the weak.

Twice within this generation we have had to take up arms against nations whose leaders, misled by the hope of easy conquest, sought to dominate the world.

We are convinced that the best way to prevent future wars is to work for the independence and well-being of all nations. This conviction guides our present efforts, and will guide our future decisions. We have participated fully and gladly in the growth of the United Nations and we seek now to strengthen and improve it. We are assisting free nations who have sought our aid in maintaining their independence. We have contributed large sums to help rebuild countries devastated by the war. We have taken the lead in breaking down barriers to world trade.

IN OUR efforts, however, to achieve the conditions of peace, we have encountered unforeseen and unwelcome obstacles.

We have found that not all nations seem to share our aims or approve our methods. We regret the differences which have arisen and the criticisms so loudly expressed. And yet we cannot afford, and we do not intend, to let current differences with some nations deter our efforts to cooperate in friendly fashion and to assist other nations who, like us, cherish freedom and seek to promote the peace and stability of the world.

The actions of this Government must be of a stature to match the dignity and influence of the United States in world affairs. The prompt provision by the Congress for interim aid will be convincing proof to all nations of our sincere determination to support the freedom-loving countries of western Europe in their endeavors to remain free and to become fully self-supporting once again.

If that action is followed by the enactment of the long-range European recovery program, this Congress will have written a noble page in world annals.

I have spoken of the economic and moral strength of the United States and of the way in which we must use that strength if we are to build a world community of free, strong and independent nations.

The strength of the United States is not due to chance. It is due to the wise decisions and bold actions taken by free and courageous men throughout the history of our democracy.

The time is at hand for new decisions and new actions of equal wisdom.

On several occasions during the past year I have reported to the Congress and to the Nation on our general economic situation. These reports have told of new high levels of production and employment. Farmers are producing 37 per cent more than in 1929. Industry is producing 65 per cent more. In terms of actual purchasing power, the avesage income of individuals, after taxes, has risen 39 per cent.

The rapid growth of our postwar economic activity has exceeded expectations and has revealed anew the potentialities of our economy.

In each of my reports, however, I have had to warn of dangers which lay ahead.

TODAY, inflation stands as an ominous threat to the prosperity we have achieved. We can no longer treat inflation—with spiraling prices and living costs—as some vague condition we may encounter in the future. We already have an alarming degree of inflation. And even more alarming, it is getting worse.

Since the middle of 1946, fuel has gone up 13 per cent; clothing prices have gone up 19 per cent; retail food prices have gone up 40 per cent. The average for all cost of living items has risen 23 per cent.

The housewife who goes to buy food today must spend $10 to buy what $7 bought a year and a half ago.

The cost of living is still climbing. In the past four months it has risen at a rate of 16 per cent a year.

Wholesale prices are rising, too. They affect every industry and trade, and they are soon translated into retail prices.

Since the middle of 1946, wholesale textile prices have gone up 32 per cent; metals have gone up 36 per cent; building materials have gone up 42 per cent. Wholesale prices on the average have gone up 40 per cent.

The harsh effects of price inflation are clear. They are felt by wage earners, farmers, and business men. Wage earners are finding that bigger pay checks this year buy less than smaller pay checks bought last year. Despite generalities about high farm prices, the income of many farm families cannot keep up with the rising costs of the things they buy. Small business men are being squeezed by rising costs. Even those who are well off are asking, "How long can it last? When is the break coming?"

In addition, price inflation threatens our entire program of foreign aid. We cannot abandon foreign aid, nor can we abandon our own people to the ravages of unchecked inflation.

We cannot allow the strength of this Nation to be wasted and our people's confidence in our free institutions to be shaken by an economic catastrophe. We shall be inviting that catastrophe unless we take steps now to halt runaway prices.

Our immediate approach to the problems of high prices and inflation should consist of three types of measures: One, to relieve monetary pressures; two, to channel scarce goods into the most essential uses; three, to deal directly with specific high prices.

One way to reduce monetary pressure is by restraining the excessive use of credit. At a time when the economy is already producing at capacity, a further expansion of credit simply gives people more dollars to use in bidding up the prices of goods.

Consumer credit is increasing at a disturbing rate. The amount outstanding has risen from 6½ billion dollars in 1945 to more than 11 billion dollars today. Even more rapid expansion is under way now, because the constrols on consumer credit exercised by the Federal Reserve System expired November 1. These credit controls should be restored. Also, some restraint should be placed on inflationary bank credit.

Legislation is required, moreover, to prevent excessive speculation on the commodity exchanges.

Another effective weapon against inflation is increased savings by the public. Every dollar that is saved instead of spent is a dollar fighting against inflation. In order to encourage additional savings, the Government should intensify its vigorous efforts to sell savings bonds.

THE second part of the program to curb inflation is to secure the most efficient use of scarce goods and otherwise channel their flow so as to relieve inflationary pressures. Grain, for example, is too badly needed to permit wasteful feeding to livestock. Steel, as another example, is too scarce to be used for nonessential purposes.

Legislation is required to authorize the allocation of scarce commodities which basically affect the cost of living, or basically affect industrial production. In these limited areas inventory control powers are also needed.

Authority to allocate transportation services should be extended.

In addition, existing export controls should be continued and strengthened. Goods that we cannot wisely export must be kept here, and the shipments we make must go where they are needed most. Profiteering in exports must be prevented.

The measures which I have already discussed will, when taken together, aid substantially in relieving inflationary pressures. For large segments of the economy, they should be adequate to meet the requirements of the present situation. However, there are limited areas of acute danger in which these measures cannot be regarded as guaranteeing adequate protection.

For example, present forecasts indicate that we are likely to have less grain and meat next year than we have had this year. The pressure on the prices of these goods would then become increasingly great. If these pressures are permitted to bring further sharp increases in food prices, they may well set off a chain reaction that would spread throughout the economy. It is surely better to take timely action to check adverse forces at particular trouble spots than to wait until general inflation has become so serious as to require drastic controls over our whole economic life.

THEREFORE, we need a third group of measures to combat inflation.

Legislation should be enacted, authorizing the Government to impose price ceilings on vital commodities in short supply that basically affect the cost of living. Basic elements in the cost of living are food, clothing, fuel and rent. In addition, the legislation should be broad enough to authorize price ceilings on those vital commodities in short supply that basically affect industrial production. This will enable us to stamp out prifiteering and speculation in these important areas.

This does not mean that price ceilings should be imposed on all items within the classes I have mentioned. For example, price ceilings would not be necessary for staple food and clothing items not in short supply or for any delicacies or luxuries. The same principle of selective treament would apply to industrial items. This selective treatment of a relatively few danger spots is very different from over-all wartime price controls.

Even should the shortages of a few commodities at the consumer level remain serious for a time, I believe that the fair distribution of such commodities can be largely accomplished without consumer rationing.

But no one can foretell exactly how serious some shortages may become next year. With serious shortages, a free market works cruel hardships on countless families and puts an unbearable pressure on prices. I therefore recommend that authority be granted, as a preparedness measure, to ration basic cost of living items on a highly selective basis.

Adequate protection from high prices and unfair distribution can be assured only by establishing authority for price ceilings and rationing in fields of critical importance. It takes several months to set up an organization and make the administrative arrangements necessary to put price control and rationing into effect. Thus, the only prudent course is to establish the authority at this time so the necessary preparations can be started. If we fail to prepare and disaster results from our unpreparedness, we will have gambled with our national safety—and lost.

If the Government imposes price ceilings covering a specific area of production, it should in all fairness have the authority, in that same area, to prevent wage increases which will make it impossible to maintain the price ceilings. This authority should be granted, although I believe that there would be few occasions for its use.

I am confident that, if the cost of living can be brought and held in reasonable relationship to the incomes of the people, wage adjustments through collective bargaining will be consistent with productivity and will avoid an inflationary round of wage increases.

Next to food, the most important element in the cost of living is rent. Under the modified rent control law, rents are rising at the rate of about 1 per cent a month. A 12 per cent annual increase in rents imposes an intolerable strain upon the family budget. The rent control law should be extended and the weaknesses in the present law should be corrected.

I am well aware that some of my proposals are drastic measures. No one regrets more than I the necesstiy for considering their use. But if we face the facts squarely, it is apparent that no other methods can safely be counted upon to protect our people from the dangers of excessively high prices and ruinous inflation.

THE AMERICAN people want adequate protection from these dangers and they are entitled to it. It should not be denied them. Nor should they be misled with half measures.

Even with the authority to impose price ceilings, the Government will intensify its efforts to obtain voluntary action. Wherever voluntary action will do the job there will be no necessity to impose the Government's authority. The very existence of these powers should have a salutary effect. They will demonstrate to each of our citizens the importance of carefully weighing each step that might lead to higher prices. They will support expanded and more specific efforts to obtain voluntary action by businessmen, labor leaders, farmers, and consumers to hold prices down.

All the actions I have described are essential to a fair and effective anti-inflation program. I look upon them as short-run insurance against the impairment of our prosperity and the threat to our future development.

We should all ponder these questions:

What would it avail the farmer, in the long run, if farm prices should go substantially higher only to be followed by a disaster such as occurred after the first World War?

What would it avail the worker, in the long run, to obtain inflationary wage increases, if they were followed by a repetition of the bitter experience when 15 million workers were out of jobs?

What would it avail the businessman to have record-breaking profits soar even higher, if they were followed by a depression which would imperil our whole system of enterprise?

The program which I have outlined is one designed to meet the existing emergencies of inflation and exorbitant price levels. It is an emergency program which should be adopted to protect our standard of living for the immediate present and to make possible economic security in the future.

But a program designed to meet a crists cannot by itself be a program designed to build for the future. We must also make plans to prevent future difficulty of the same nature.

Our long-range programs must stress ever-increasing production.

To accomplish this for agriculture, we need a comprehensive farm program. We shall need programs to increase the use of farm products by industry and consumers in this country when other countries become more nearly self-sufficient. Long-range national measures will be needed to protect the farm population against ruinous deflation in farm production and prices.

To expand industrial output, we need a long-range program to overcome basic shortages in capacity and equipment. To provide markets for increased output of farm and factory, we shall need long-range programs to raise the standard of living, particularly for families of low income.

But the first step toward this progress in the future is to deal with the critical present. We must win the battle against inflation, so that our long-range efforts may start from high levels of prosperity and not from the depths of depression

IN SUMMARY, the immediate anti-inflation program that I recommend calls for the following legislative action:

1. To restore consumer credit controls and to restrain the creation of inflationary bank credit.

2. To authorize the regulation of speculative trading on the commodity exchanges.

3. To extend and strengthen export controls.

4. To extend authority to allocate transportation facilities and equipment.

5. To authorize measures which will induce the marketing of livestock and poultry at weights and grades that represent the most efficient utilization of grain.

6. To enable the Department of Agriculture to expand its program of encouraging conservation practices in this country, and to authorize measures designed to increase the production of foods in foreign countries.

7. To authorize allocation and inventory control of scarce commodities which basically affect the cost of living or industrial production.

8. To extend and strengthen rent control.

9. To authorize consumer rationing on products in short supply which basically affect the cost of living.

10. To authorize price ceilings on products in short supply which basically affect the cost of living or industrial production, and to authorize such wage ceilings as are essential to maintain the necessary price ceilings.

If we negfiect our economic ills at home, if we fail to halt the march of inflation, we may bring o na depression from which our economic system, as we know it, might not recover. And if we turn our backs on nations still struggling to recover from the agony of war, not yet able to stand on their fet, we may lose for all time the chance to obtain a world where free peoples can live in enduring peace.

The freedom that we cherish in our own economy and the freedom that we enjoy in the world today are both at stake.

I have recommended interim aid for certain western European countries and a program to curb inflation in the United States. I regard the measures which I have presented to you as vital and essential to the welfare of the nation.

WKhen the American people have faced decisions of such magnitude in the past, they have taken the right course.

I am confident that the Congress, guided by the will of the people will take the right course on this occasion.

Mississippi Senator Takes Oath of Office

By The Associated Press

A tall, quiet Mississippian who said he came to Washington "to listen—not to talk" took a seat in the Senate today as successor to the late Theodore G. Bilbo, one of the Senate's more stormy figures.

Senator John C. Stennis, who won a special Mississippi election November 4 to select a successor for the remaining five years of Bilbo's term, was given the oath of office in a brief ceremony immediately after the Senate convened yesterday.

It was the first time in nearly a year that Mississippi has had two Senators entitled to floor privileges. Last January the Senate declined to seat Bilbo, an outgrowth of controversy over his views on "white supremacy" and the right of Negroes to vote.

Regret Expressed

Both the House and Senate adopted resolutions expressing regret at Bilbo's death, last August 21.

Representative Rankin (D., Miss.) told the House that "one of the most shameful chapters of American history" will be the treatment of Bilbo.

On the House side, Charles E. Potter, a legless war veteran, was sworn in as a Representative from Michigan's Eleventh District.

A Republican, the 31-year-old Potter was elected last August 26 to succeed the late Fred Bradley. Potter is from Cheboygan.

Succeeds Springer

Ralph Harvey, Republican, of Newcastle succeeded the late Representative Raymond S. Springer of Connersville as Indiana's Tenth District Representative in Congress.

Two Texans also took their oath of office.

They are Representatives Clark Thompson of Galveston and Ken Regan of Midland, both Democrats. Thompson succeeds the late Representative J. J. Mansfield of Columbus, and Regan succees R. E. Thomason of El Paso, now a Federal District judge.

Meanwhile the contested election of James C. Davis as Representative from Georgia's Fifth District finally reached the House Committee on Administration yesterday—more than a year after the voting.

Helen Douglas Mankin, who served out the unexpired term of former Representative Robert Ramspeck, and Wyman C. Lowe, Atlanta college professor, are contesting Davis' election a year ago.

Mrs. Mankin contends the District Democratic Committee which ruled that the election would be based upon county unit votes, rather than popular votes, was illegally constituted.

Trial of D. C. Man in $72,000 Fraud Opens

The trial of George A. Gromley, 51, of 3802 Fulton st. nw., on charges of fraud against the Government got under way yesterday in the United States District Court at Alexandria.

Gormley was indicted last winter along with Louis V. Dionne, 30-year-old War Assets Administration employe, for alleged collaboration in a scheme to defraud the Government of 30,000 yards of woolen cloth, valued at $72,000.

Dionne pleaded guilty to the charges that, while employed at the Army Quartermaster Depot in Fairfax County, he falsified a sales receipt to show that Gormley paid $96,000 for 40,000 yards of cloth. Gormley allegedly paid $24,000 for 10,000 yards but received 40,000, according to the indictment.

Walkley Johnson, Assistant United States attorney, said Dionne would take the stand today as a government witness.

Testimony yesterday consisted chiefly of introducing sales slips and shipping orders to trace the cloth from its sale to its destination to a woolen dealer in New York.

The dealer, Henry Marks, told the jury Gormley originally offered 10,000 yards of cloth but later said he could get an additional 30,000 yards of faulty cloth at a cheaper price. Marks said he bought the entire lot for $53,000.

U. S. Cuts Tariff Duties to Near 1913 Level

steds, an important British export to this country, was cut 25 per cent; on linen handkerchiefs, 40 per cent; on linen fabrics, 20 per cent; on high quality chinaware, 22½ per cent; on glassware, 20 per cent, and on silverware, 16 per cent.

Champagne Duty Halved

France, desperately in need of increasing her sales to the United States, will benefit from a 50 per cent cut in the duties on cognac and champagne, a 33 1/3 per cent cut on table wines, a 45 per cent cut on silk fabrics, and a 20 per cent cut on rayon staple fibre, formerly a big American import from France and from the United Kingdom and Belgium as well.

The duty on raw wool, Australia's main export and the mainstay of her economy, was cut 25 per cent. The duty was cut 50 per cent on jute burlap and bags, a product chiefly from India, which accounted for 51 million dollars' worth of imports in a single pre-war year.

Fifty per cent cuts were also made in the tariffs on bauxite, copper ore, manganese and other strategic materials.

Altogether, the agreements affected 75 per cent of the world's foreign trade, and was described at the State Department as "unprecedented" in their scope and volume.

The department called them "the first major step to be taken by important nations to reverse the trend toward trade restriction and economic isolation which has persisted throughout the world since the first World War."

Although the United States participated directly in 15 separate country-to-country negotiations a Geneva, it will benefit indirectly from 91 other Geneva negotiations in which it did not take part. The benefits extended to one nation are applicable to all.

Under Act of 1934

The American tariff reductions were negotiated under the Trade Agreements Act of 1934, four times extended, and due for renewal or replacement before June 30 of next year. In its present form the act gives the President power to reduce tariffs up to 50 per cent, although with elaborate "escape clauses" and renegotiation in case any item is proved to work hardship on American industry.

On the foreign side the concessions to American products were sweeping, and in several items abolished British Empire preferences althougher. The United Kingdom, for example, abolished its Empire preference on fresh apples, prunes, hams and farm tractors, although the concession is almost meaningless at the moment because of Britain import restrictions.

France slashed the duty on American wheat by two-thirds, on lard by 59 per cent, on canned fruit by 50 per cent, on automobiles by nearly 50 per cent. Most countries cut the tariff or preference rate on American automobiles, trucks, motorcycles and parts, electrical appliances, radios, refrigerators and office machinery.

Amreican commodities affected by the agreements are valued at nearly $1,400,000,000 annually. Even if it takes years for dollar shortages to be overcome and import restrictions eased, the new agreements are bound to put American products into competitive positions where they were not able to scale tariff walls before.

Apart from their dollar shortages, many European industries are not yet able to export as much as their prewar volume. This is true of the Scotch whisky distillers, for example, who have had to ration exports and spread stocks because of the long wartime interruption in distilling. Other exporting industries, like those making Canadian forest products, are already stretched almost to capacity and will need expansion before they can take full advantage of the American concessions.

This is one reason why State Department spokesmen yesterday emphasized the long-range benefits of the new agreements rather than their immediate effects. They attack importance also to general provisions made at Geneva setting up new standards of international trade, among them a clause that import quotas may be imposed only in case of foreign exchange or "balance of payments" difficulties.

Canada's Difficulties Outlined

The Export-Import Bank loan to Canada yesterday was a dramatic example of these difficulties—dramatic because Canada is working hard and is highly prosperous, yet needs help urgently. It used to make up its normal excess of imports from the United States by selling its products to Great Britain and exchanging the sterling proceeds for dollars.

Now that sterling is no longer convertible, Canada simply lacks the dollars to meet its need. The 300 million dollar credit will be available until December 31 of next year, and at Canada's suggestion will be repaid in three equal annual instalments on the third, fourth and fifth anniversary dates of each drawing.

The agreement also provides that Canada will seek loans in the private United States market, and if successful will reduce the amount of the Export-Import Bank loan.

ary bill, in 1945. That bill was intended to settle the boundary dispute existing in various form for some 150 years, and made the airport area a sort of Federal reservation in Virginia, placing the District boundary generally on the high water mark of the Virginia side of the Potomac.

However, legislators at that time apparently were unaware that the criminal code of the United States made the area subject to all sections of the Virginia Code requiring racial segregation.

Problem Long Weighed

Richard E. Elwell, general counsel of the Civil Aeronautics Administration, which operates the airport, said the problem of segregation, "which is definitely against national policy," has been under consideration for some time.

The Commerce Department said the proposal was sent to the Speaker of the House early last August, but could not be brought up until Congress went into formal session.

Eating facilities at the airport include two cafeterias in the main building, one of them for Negroes, a coffee shop and the terrace dining room, plus another cafeteria at the south end of the airport which has a separate room for Negroes.

Paul Steiner, assistant airport administrator, said separate facilities for whites and Negroes have been maintained since the airport opened June 15, 1941 because of the dispute over jurisdiction in the area.

He said the airport maintains separate toilet facilities for whites and Negro employes, but not for passengers.

2 Ex-Convicts Surrender in Rape, Killing

Withee, Wis., Nov. 17 (U.P.).—Two desperadoes who barricaded themselves in an isolated farm house, holding a family of four as hostages, surrendered to a heavily-armed posse today, and confessed the slaying of a University of Wisconsin student, and the rape of his coed sister-in-law.

Winslow Sennett

The men, Buford Sennett, 22, and Robert Winslow, 23, both former convicts, released their terrified captives and surrendered meekly when a 50-man posse threatened to attack the house with tear gas and tommy guns.

District Attorney William J. Coyne said both admitted they shot and killed Carl L. Carlson, 25, a premedical student, and raped Janet Ann Rosenblatt, 19, a University of Michigan coed, last Friday night after offering them a ride from Madison, Wis., to Carlson's home.

Carlson's body still has not been found. The men admitted Coyne said, that they dumped it into a river, but claimed they could not remember the exact spot.

The men terrorized the family of Peter Pomputis, 66, for 10½ hours. They stayed in a barn, keeping watch over Pomputis and his wife, Josephine, 64, most of the day. They forced Pomputis' two sons, Anthony, 23, and Alfred, 21, to start painting a stolen automobile in which the former convicts hoped to escape.

The two sons dared not flee lest the desperadoes harm their parents.

As police cars moved toward the farmyard, the former convicts released Pomputis and his wife from the barn and then hid in a haymow. The police moved in and a loud speaker blared a warning "15 minutes or we start shooting. Come out with your hands up."

There was silence for five minutes. Then Sennett stepped out, his hands above his head. A few minutes later Winslow stepped out, his hands raised.

Meat Believed First Target If Curbs Return

yesterday only in general terms in his message to Congress.

1. Restoration of consumer credit controls and restraint of inflationary bank credit.

The first half of this recommendation calls only for a return of the Federal Reserve Board's "Regulation W," which epired November 1. It prescribed that in installment buying, one-third of the amount had to be expended at once as a down payment (one-fifth in the case of furniture) and the full amount had to be paid off in a maximum of 15 months.

Would Limit Loan Power

The second part of the recommendation is directed toward limiting banks' power to make loans. There are two methods being considered, or a combination of both. One calls for legislation allowing the Federal Reserve banks to raise the reserve requirements from member banks above their present 20 per cent for large city banks and 14 per cent for "country" banks.

The other contemplates a law permitting the Federal Reserve Board to require that, in addition to present reserves, member banks maintain a specified amount of reserves in the form of Government bonds. This is to prevent the present practice of banks selling the holdings of Government securities and lending the cash proceeds.

2. Regulating speculative trading on the commodity exchanges.

The only regulations at present for margin requirements are those imposed by the exchanges themselves. The President's proposal is thought to call for the Agriculture Department or some other agency to be given power to set margin requirements directly. These might be higher than the present 33 1/3 per cent generally in effect, and might cover many other commodities besides grain.

In addition, the Government wants power to limit the allowable speculative position of any one market operator. Any one agent may now hold two million bushels of grain or 30,000 bales of cotton.

The Agriculture Department also wants authority to require more detailed reports from dealers and exchanges.

3 Extension and strengthening of export controls.

These controls, administered by the Department of Commerce, expire at the end of February. The President wants them re-enacted, and a prime requisite is more money for their administration.

This is to permit more adequate enforcement against the practice of selling export licenses; ability to control a wider range of commodities, and to regulate the destination of exports. Some are going to countries where they are filling less essential needs than those existing in the Marshall Plan nations.

4. Extension of authority to allocate transportation facilities and equipment.

Existing authority, administered by the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Office of Defense Transportation, also expires at the end of February. The Administration wants the controls continued without much change. They permit the direction of freight and other cars, and the use of terminal facilities, for maximum efficiency.

5. Prevention of the over-feeding of grain to livestock and poultry.

The Administration is thought to contemplate a system of premium payments for light weight hogs and non-grain-finished cattle, and penalty taxes against overweight hogs and grain-topped beef. The payments and taxes, which might balance off to be self-financing, would likely be applied at the processor level.

The desired effect is to make it economically worthwhile for breeders to market hogs and cattle at a nearlier stage, without first feeding them on grain to increase their weight and improve their grade. This is the most wasteful form of using grain, from a standpoint of maximum nourishment.

6. Encouragement of domestic production in foreign countries.

The first part of the program contemplates some additional soil conservation powers for the Agriculture Department. The second and most important part envisages the grant of authority to the Commodity Credit Corp. to enter into contracts with other countries—mostly in South America. Under them, the other countries would be induced to grow the maximum and optimum kind of foodstuffs, on assurance of their purchase by the United States.

Further, the contract powers would permit this country to finance the increased production of fats and other foods, and the restoration of food industries in war-devastated areas of Asia and the Pacific.

7. Authorization of allocations and inventory controls on scarce commodities.

These would be similar to the controls exercised by the War Production Board and other agencies during hostilities. They would affect primarily steel, certain types of farm, mining an delectrical machinery, railroad equipment, coal, fertilizer and grain.

Under the desired controls, the Administration would have power to specify how much of each commodity was to go to each type of user, domestic and foreign. Nonessential consumers would be denied part or all of their supplies.

8. Extension and strengthening of rent controls.

These expire on March 30, leaving only such few controls as exist under some States' laws. (The District of Columbia law expires December 31, 1948.) The Administration wants the present law continued, and strengthened to the extent that the Government can sue landlords for violations, and can increase its enforcement staff to obtain injunctions where necessary.

Mother, 17, Fleeing Fire, Throws Baby Over High Fence

Baltimore, Nov. 17 (AP).—A 17-year-old mother threw her baby son over a 7-foot fence to safety as she fled a fire that destroyed her home here today.

The 17-month-old boy landed in the arms of a waiting neighbor.

Mrs. Catherine Martin found herself trapped in the burning house after an amateur fire-fighter blocked the front door in an effort to pull a flaming chair through it. Rushing out the back door carrying her son and a 5-year-old niece, Mrs. Martin tossed the boy to Mrs. Lena Adams. The back yard is entirely enclosed by the fence.

The girl, Jean Belardo, was assisted over the fence, followed by Mrs. Martin, in nightclothes and barefooted.

Guerrieri Girl Misses Mother On Birthday

Aside from four cases of the sniffles—three from colds and one due to disappointment—there were no flaws in Carmella Lois Guerrieri's eighth birthday celebration last night.

Carmella shed a tear for her mother, Mrs. Lois Guerrieri, who landed in London yesterday to attend this afternoon's party at St. James' Palace—invited to the affair in thanks for sending Princess Elizabeth a dress.

The other three Guerrieri children—Richard 12, Lois Marie 6 and Mary Ann 3—sniffled from colds and temporary gloom at their mother's absence. But in their second-story apartment at 1724 S st. se., they joined their father in the birthday cake, baked by their aunt, Mrs. Rosalie Smith.

The merriment of gifts and ice cream; of watching Carmella attempting to blow out the candles helped carry them through another hour or so of their mother's absence.

Richard, an accomplished cake baker by his own admission as well as his parents' and teachers', is planning a homecoming celebration for his mother—and he'll bake the cake.

Mrs. Guerrieri, 32, whomakes dresses, branched out into one for royalty when she read that clothing is curtailed in England and that Princess Elizabeth's wedding to Lieut. Philip Mountbatten Thursday would not be elaborate.

When she agreed to go, The Washington Post sent her over to report her reactions to the event.

Her TWA Constellation Star of Dublin left LaGuardia Field at 12:38 p. m. Sunday; landed in London yesterday morning via Stephenville, Newfoundland and Shannon, Eire.

their steady hum was rather comforting. I thinght "as long as they go to Ireland and London, I do, too."

Sleep, of which I've had little since leaving Washington Saturday noon, wouldn't seem to come through all this excitement. I've been thinking almost constantly that this is my little girl's (Carmella, whose eighth birthday was yesterday) birthday and wished with every breath that I could be with her if only for a minute.

Everytime I saw a red, white and blue flag my heart would swell for I knew I would not be treated so well or be able to do any such thing anywhere else in the world.

I was very tired and sleepy when TWA's representative met me right at the bottom step as I got off the plane this morning.

I'm hoping now I won't be too thrilled at the Palace tomorrow to remember what I see.

Mrs. Guerrieri, mother of four children and part-time dressmaker, made and mailed to Princess Elizabeth a wedding gift dress. By return mail, she received a thank-you letter and an invitation to Elizabeth's wedding party. The party is scheduled to be held in St. James's Palace this afternoon. Mrs. Guerrieri, 32, of 1724 S st. se., was sent to London by the Washington Post to attend the party and cable accounts of her daily experiences.

Business Unit 1 will report in detail results of the campaign to raise $1,532,500 from large business organizations.

At yesterday's meeting, Mrs. Eileen Hurley of the staff of the Instructive Visiting Nurses Society, a Chest agency, described a typical work day in which she brought nursing aid to six persons.

"Pathos and humor, courage and fear, physical weakness and strength, those are what I see every day," she said.

J. S. Bartlett, chairman of Business Unit 2, described the campaign to raise $150,000 this year from small business organizations. Last year the goal for this group was $48,000, he said.

Movie Star Edith Fellows opened the program by singing two songs.

Although the Government Unit made no report at the meeting, it was announced the State Department has oversubscribed its $62,000 quota and Internal Revenue its $45,811 goal. At last Friday's meeting the Government Unit reported 69.9 per cent of its $1,357,500 quota subscribed.

Percentages reached by other units are:

Business Unit 1, 45 per cent of $1,532,500; Business Unit 2, 18.2 per cent of $150,000; Residential, 44.3 per cent of $537,500; Alexandria, 42 per cent of $58,000; Arlington, 10.9 per cent of $53,000; Fairfax, 11.3 per cent of $43,200; Montgomery, 14.2 per cent of $124,000, and Prince Georges, 28.7 per cent of $44,000.

Russians Have 14,000 Planes, 3 Times Ours, Spaatz Says

least some United States types plus our greater proportion of heavy bombers, and larger plane production potential were believed to account for his willingness to accept a 1 to 2 inferiority in numbers.

"The best defense against air attack," Spaatz told the commission, "is a quick and paralyzing retaliatory blow."

The following six-point program he said would give us the power for such a blow:

1. A Regular Air Force of 70 combat groups and 22 separate squadrons equipped with 6869 first line planes, backed by a reserve of 8100 modern aircraft. This will require 400,000 officers and enlisted men and 150,000 civilians.

2. An Air National Guard of 3212 modern first line planes, organized into 27 groups. (The Guard now has 1900 planes), plus an Air Reserve of 2360 combat type second line planes.

3. A well-organized air defense system, employing a radar network placed as far from our shores as possible and operating.

Air Industry's Par.

4. A sound, healthy and "expansible" aircraft manufacturing industry and air transport industry. The former should build a minimum of 3200 military planes of 46,414,000 pounds air-frame weight annually to keep the Air Force modern and the industry healthy.

5. An adequate research and development program to keep America ahead of other powers.

6. A better industrial mobilization program. That at present is unsatisfactory, Spaatz said.

The Air Force chief emphasized his recommendation for building 3200 warplanes annually, as the "key" to the whole program. This would result in replacing the force every six years, he said.

The present 3.3 billion dollar Air Force appropriation, Spaatz said, will provide only for 55 combat groups, plus a skeletonized organization for the other 15 groups deemed the necessary minimum. These deficiences, he declared, "are of serious concern to us."

Soviet Still Ahead

Under questioning by commission members, Spaatz said that even with the proposed 70-group program, the Soviet air force still would be twice as strong numerically as ours. The M-Day force of 6869 Regular Air Force and 3212 National Guard planes, provides about 7000 combat types, the rest trainers and cargo craft.

"It is everyday knowledge that of the world's nations," Spaatz testified, "the only one which now could seriously threaten the security of this country is the same nation with which we are most frequently in conflict in the deliberations of the United Nations.

"It would be less than prudent . . . not to scrutinize carefully the current and potential power and probable intentions of the only effective adversary discernable in the foreseeable future.

"Let us remember that in the year 1944 this same nation produced more than 40,000 planes in its own factories. We remember also that in the same year, 1944, two of our B-29 aircraft fell into their hands. We believe that she maintains today some 14,000 aircraft in first-line combat units.

"We think it significant that last year efforts were made to place an order with leading (American) rubber companies for a substantial number of sets of tires, wheels and brake assemblies. It is well known that entire plants as well as top-flight representatives of German know-how have moved eastward.

"The development of long-range bombers becomes more significant as possession of the atomic bomb by any other nation becomes a reality."

Spaatz made it plain that the Russian effort to buy B-29 landing gear in this country was unsuccessful.

Stassen Invades Arkansas, Finds Taft South's Favorite

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 17.—Harold E. Stassen invaded the Democratic "Solid South" today, hunting delegates in his drive for the Republican presidential nomination.

He learned, if he was told the same thing that reporters were told, that Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio is the darling of most of the old-timers in the skeleton Republican Party in this area of Dixie.

But he also must have learned that there is a serious doubt as to whether Taft can defeat President Truman in '48, and that therefore the Ohioan cannot count on hogtied delegations at the GOP national convention at Philadelphia in June.

The political picture here in Arkansas is about the same as it was in Texas, where Stassen spent last night. Taft seems the strongest of the Republican candidates, but his strength is a tentative thing that could disappear even before convention time. There is some sentiment for Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York and also for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

City Proves Hospitable

Stassen, 40-year-old former Governor of Minnesota and wartime aide to Admiral Willam (Bull) Halsey, is not as well-known as any of the aforementioned. That is why he has come down this way, hoping to get a part of Texas' 23 delegates and Arkansas' 14.

Like any Republican, Stassen seemed an oddity in this Democratic stronghold. The welcome accorded him, however, was bipartisan and was in the best tradition of Southern hospitality.

Sam Wassell, Demoocratic Mayor of Little Rock, was at the airport to meet the candidate, along with Republican National Committeeman Wallace Townsend and other GOP leaders. A key to the city, made of gilded cardboard and garlanded with red roses, was handed to Stassen as he emerged from his chartered United Airlines plane. Then two motorcycle cops, hardly Republicans, escorted him through the city to the Marion Hotel.

Would Aid Small Business

Tonight Stassen spoke before the Young Businessmen's Association of Little Rock, 95 per cent of whose members are Democrats. His theme was increased opportunities for small business and higher income for white-collar workers.

In Amarillo, Tex., last night, Stassen received a telegram from Col. R. B. Creager, veteran Republican National Committeeman for the Lone Star State. It contained a warm message of greeting. Stassen announced he will return to Texas January 20 and Creager will escort him on a tour that will include Brownsville and other cities.

The political talk in Amarillo was that Creager, an old Taft supporter, had put down a revolt against his leadership, but in doing so had made a promise. This was to the effect that he would not insist on the Texas delegation going along with Taft if, at convention time, it appears that the Ohioan is not likely to be a winner over President Truman. The Texas Republicans, like those all through the South, want a winner. It has been a long time since they have had any Federal patronage, and they are hungry.

Food Prices Rise During Truman Talk

Grains, cotton, butter, eggs and other commodities advanced sharply yesterday, as President Truman delivered his message on domestic prices and foreign relief.

Until the President started talking, nearly all commodities had suffered a severe slump. But as he continued, urging Government controls on speculative trading in commodities, rationing and price controls to halt rising prices, nearly all items moved upwards.

December wheat, which had slumped from Saturday's close of $3 a bushel to $2.95 in nervous trading during the morning, jumped to $3.03 before the close shortly after the President finished. May wheat made an even greater rally, jumping from a low of $2.81½ to $2.93 by the close.

Both corn and oats followed the trend, December corn going up from a low of $2.36⅝ at noon, to $2.40½ at the close.

Cotton futures also advanced sharply. Gains ranging from $1.45 to $2.35 a bale (500 pounds) were recordeed at New York. Wool tops advanced 1½ to 2 cents a pound.

Storage butter went up as much as two cents a pound, although fresh butter and poultry were largely unchanged from the Saturday close. Eggs moved upwards as much as 1 cent a dozen.

Soybeans closed at $3.65, five cents lower than Saturday's close but three cents above the low reached before noon.

Assassin Reported Seeking Young Siam King in Europe

Bangkok, Siam, Nov. 17 (AP).—A military spokesman declared today seven persons now in custody have named a former naval officer as the slayer of King Ananda Mahidol, and that a would-be assassin was en route to Switzerland to deal the same fate to the King's successor, Phumpiphon Aduldet.

[The seven persons allegedly admitted standing watch while the naval officer shot the monarch in the palace last June.]

The spokesman did not name the officer, or say whether he was in custody.

He said the man bent on killing 19-year-old Phumphiphon Aduldet, a student at Lausanne, had reached Europe, and that European police had been asked to intercept him.

The spokesman said the assassination was part of a conspiracy to set up a republic. The government has accused former members of Free Thai, a wartime pro-allied underground movement, of being behind the conspiracy.

The FBI Checkup

The candid and explicit replies of J. Edgar Hoover, head of the FBI, to questions put by Bert Andrews of the New York Herald Tribune about methods of conducting investigations under the loyalty program should set at rest unfounded fears that the FBI has become a formidable secret police force spying on Government employes, invading their privacy without cause, violating their civil rights, and threatening to reduce them to the status of trembling slaves of a tyrannical government. Mr. Hoover's account of the procedure followed in checking complaints shows the absurdity of such heated imaginings. He points out that the FBI agents do not start an investigation on their own initiative. First they must be supplied with information constituting a substantial basis for an investigation. Then the investigation follows in accordance with executive instructions. In other words, the FBI supplies on request the facts bearing on questions of disloyalty, but it does not hunt for suspects not does it prosecute those individuals who come under its scrutiny.

Owing to the nature of their work, inefficient, overzealous agents of the FBI may make mistakes that result in damage to the reputation of loyal and law-abiding citizens. Mr. Hoover admits as much, but he also points out that employes of the FBI undergo a rigid screening process before entering the service, and are subsequently given an intensive training course, with special emphasis on protection of the civil rights of individuals. Moreover, if agents conduct themselves improperly, the citizen may appeal to the FBI for an investigation. By emphasizing all these and other safeguards for the protection of individuals who come under the scrutiny of the FBI, Mr. Hoover is able to offer a convincing refutation of the wild charges that have been going the rounds of late about the role played by the FBI in connection with the loyalty probes.

Geneva Agreement

The substantial concessions both granted and received by the United States in the general agreement on tariffs and trade signed at Geneva last month and made public yesterday will at present be less impressive in practice than they are on paper. With the world still suffering the aftermath of war, no lowering of trade barriers can bring a sudden spurt in international commerce. Many of the concessions granted by war-devastated countries will not become effective at once, moreover, because their acute shortage of foreign exchange makes such action impracticable. Likewise some of the concessions made by the United States will mean little to producers in other countries who now have comparatively few goods to send us.

When due allowance is made, however, for these inescapable limitations upon the agreement, it is nonetheless a significant move in the direction of freer movement of goods across national boundaries. The United States has made some notable concessions on such products as cattle, softwood lumber, table linen, burlap, whisky and wines, footwear, leather gloves, perfumes, lace, wool, glassware, chinaware, silver and various strategic metals of which we need larger supplies. Concessions were made on 70 per cent of all dutiable imports. Some of the concessions consisted of binding existing rates, but the duty reductions are numerous. And in many instances the cuts are deep. On items imported to the value of $272,700,000 in 1939, or 43 per cent of our dutiable imports, the tariff reduction was from 35 to 50 per cent.

These concessions on the part of the United States will go into effect on January 1 in spite of the fact that concessions made by the dollar-poor countries will remain suspended while they are struggling to restore some measure of balance to their foreign trade. As a horse-trading proposition, this would seem unfair. But actually it should work to the advantage of the United States as well as other parties to the agreement. In some instances it will encourage those countries to send us more goods that are scarce here. Certainly there is every argument for increasing the low-duty cattle quota in this period of inadequate meat supplies. Lower duties on strategic metals to facilitate stockpiling are unmistakably in the national interest. And at a time when Congress is considering large appropriations to save western Europe from economic collapse, the wisdom of helping those countries to sell more of their products in our own inflation-harried economy does not seem open to question.

Our great outpouring of exports must ultimately be balanced by a comparable flow of imports to save ourselves from chronically bailing out the countries that trade with us from fresh dollar crises. Our whole foreign policy is now geared to the proposition that economic health in western Europe is essential to our security. To lower the cost of that policy we must necessarily open our markets to the products they can send us to pay for the imports they must have from us.

Next Year's Food

The rains which fell on the great Southwestern winter wheat belt last week came just in time to prevent utter disaster. November 15 ordinarily is regarded as the "cutoff date" after which rain cannot repair the ravages of drouth. The drouth already had become alarming in Kansas, Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle, which together last year produced more than one third of the total wheat crop. According to experts, with one exception this had been the driest fall in 60 years. Many farmers had been unable to sow their wheat, and elsewhere the seed had failed to germinate. With food a vital item in the economic recovery program, the implications were crucial for America and a hungry world. Last week's moisture appears to have relieved the threat, at least temporarily. Although some damage to next year's crop has been sustained, a normal or near-normal harvest may be possible with continued favorable conditions.

The fact is, however, that even a normal crop will leave the world situation extremely critical. Certainly we cannot afford to count on the bumper wheat crop which was so providential this year as an index of ordinary grain production. The 1947 crop was 1400 million bushels, whereas the normal crop has averaged about 900 million bushels. If weather in 1947 had been "normal," according to the Harriman report wheat production probably would have been 20 per cent smaller and exports would have been cut in half. Both the Harriman and Krug reports are in agreement that for the next few years American grain exports should run between 300 and 400 million bushels yearly. The 1946-47 season total was 550 million bushels. "The salient fact so far as United States export capacity is concerned," the Harriman report asserts, "is that grain exports during the 1948-51 period cannot be depended upon to average as much as two thirds of the 1936-47 level."

A below-normal wheat crop could throw even these estimates out of kilter. It would greatly intensify the competition between Marshall Plan needs and domestic demand for wheat. Even with a return of ideal growing weather, there probably will be less food—at least in those items requiring use of grain—available to Americans next year. The Department of Agriculture already has predicted that meat supplies will be at a lower level than during the war. This does not imply in any sense that Americans need go hungry, but it does mean some change of eating habits, such as a return to the level of meat consumption that prevailed before the war, and an organized campaign against waste.

That is the problem. The Truman message to Congress recommends specific measures which are essential in combating the crisis. Allocation powers, augmented export controls, marketing inducements, speculation curbs, selective price control on grain and meat and rationing machinery in readiness—these will provide the Government the authority it needs to act in the breach. Beyond this program, we need to broaden the sense of individual responsibility in food-saving. The fact that every American must come to realize is that the United States faces an inexorable choice on what to do not only with its grain, but also with its total food supply. This places a premium on domestic conservation and education of the people to eat less meat and bread than they are now consuming. Many of us can do this with beneficial effect on our own health. If the best use is to be made of available grain, then so far as possible wheat must be employed directly as human food. If we use our grain wisely in this context, a smaller crop may serve nearly as well as have larger crops heretofore. The important thing is to face the facts and not underestimate the emergency.

Unofficial Statesmen

The organization of a national nonpartisan committee, under the chairmanship of Henry L. Stimson, former Secretary of State and of War, is the best sort of citizen backing that could be given to the Marshall Plan. Some of the country's ablest unofficial statesmen are members of the committee. At the same time its membership includes representatives of many different interests and groups. Such men as Robert P. Patterson, Dean Acheson, Allen W. Dulles, Herbert H. Lehman, Winthrop W. Aldrich, James B. Carey and David Dubinsky are on the executive committee. A glance at the roster of the committee's national council is one of the best indications we know of the very broad backing that the European recovery program has won.

For another reason The Washington Post is pleased to see this mobilization of public sentiment behind our nonpartisan foreign policy by a well directed citizen group. On several occasions we have urged the organization of an unofficial body of advisers on foreign policy, including many of the men who are now associated with this effort. We think that such a body of elder statesmen, selected without regard for party affiliations, could render invaluable aid to the State Department. Not only would their confidential counsel in the formulation of foreign policy be valuable; their assistance in carrying on a campaign in such emergencies as the present would give immeasurable strength to any wise policy that an administration might be pursuing. We hope that the contribution of the Committee for the Marshall Plan will be so outstanding as further to demonstrate the usefulness of a permanent council of unofficial statesmen working with the Department of State.

GIFTS FOR THE WINTER

Once an old woman
Gave me straw-flowers
Stiff and prickly
As her tounge,
Russet and yellow,
sibilant of autumn,
When I was young.
Once an old woman
Gave me wisdom
Stubborn and accurate
As her tongue,
Pungent, salubrious, everlasting
Through all the winters
Since I was young.

The President And The Crisis

The President meets head-on the dilemma which is presented to this country by the double-barrelled need of sustaining free institutions abroad and halting our own "alarming" inflation. Without a doubt our inflation is due in part to our shipments to the necessitous nations. No government can enter the markets for the purchase of a third of our wheat for export without putting up the price. But to stop our consignments would be to indulge in a squint-eyed policy. If the nations are not helped, they may not survive as independent countries. As Mr. Truman puts it, "human misery and chaos lead to strife and conquest. Hunger and poverty tempt the strong to prey upon the weak."

Mr. Truman's meaning is as plain as daylight. He has, as we all must have, the Soviet Union in mind. If these nations were to be submerged in a Russian world, we should have to face a startling readjustment of our domestic life, a readjustment in the direction of a bristling armed camp, ready for military action. Knowledge of the impact of such a contingency has been envisaged by all American statesmen since Jefferson. Jefferson said that the one thing this country can never tolerate is a Europe under the tyrant's heel. If the statement were valid in days dependent for communication on the sailing ship, its validity springs to the eyes now that space has been conquered. There is thus no choice. We must introduce safeguards at home while continuing to help Europe tide over its food and fuel crisis till action has been taken on the Marshall Plan for applying a cure in place of a palliative.

Mr. Truman's message is worded in a style befitting the critical occasion which brought the Congress in session. His phrases are as eloquent and as persuasive as any we recall in a presidential message. Rightly he keys his request to the "great responsibility that goes with great power." He speaks humbly of our possession of both these attributes. It is, as he says, "an awe-inspiring truth that the manner in which we exert our strength now, and in the future, will have a decisive effect on the course of civilization."

Our inflation is in part responsible for the slow progress of European reconstruction. Only from the Western Hemisphere, free as it is from devastation, come the goods needed for repair and sustenance while repair is in progress. But the rising prices of these goods already have absorbed Europe's dollar resources and its American credits. The same experience will attend the Marshall Plan unless the American inflation is arrested. When the Paris report on the Marshall Plan was drafted, certain assumptions on American prices were made which, in the light of events in the last few months, now seem unsound. A sound price structure in America, in short, is basic to world reconstruction.

But the inflation has to be stopped in the interests of every American. The existing pinch is evident in every home below the top brackets. President Truman puts it in figures. The housewife who goes to buy food today must spend $10 to buy what $7 bought a year and a half ago, and the cost of living is still climbing, at a present pace of 16 per cent a year. If this price inflation threatens our entire program of foreign aid, how much more immediate and personal is the impact upon our own people?

In the circumstances the President's prescription is as bold as the crisis demands. Inflation is a phenomenon of too much money competing with too few goods. President Truman would reduce the money pressure by curbing the excessive use of credit by business and consumer alike. On the goods front he asks for authorization of allocation powers where these are no longer available and for the continuance and strengthening of export controls. These powers are an essential instrument in the war on waste that we must now declare. The third category of measures will be the most contentious. Mr. Truman asks for the renewal of selective, not over-all, price controls "on vital commodities in short supply that basically affect the cost of living," coupled with the necessary wage controls lest wage increases render impossible the task of maintaining these price ceilings. The President approaches this request with evident reluctance, saying he is aware that he is proposing drastic remedies, but the signs of "runaway" inflation give him no option. It is what William James would call a "forced option." It should surely be apparent that Mr. Truman, who a short while ago was talking of these powers as the prerogative of a police state, would be the last man to use them if they were not needed.

In this as in other items in his program the President has displayed the wisdom that comes from attention to the stark realities disclosed in his momentous message. The inflation they are intended to arrest would inevitably lead to the depression on which the Soviet is reckoning for an unimpeded path to conquest.

Arlington Schools

In our recent campaign for the Arlington School Board, we were very anxious that people in Arlington understand the school situation and the issues involved in the election. We kow you agree with us that a well informed electorate is essential if our democratic form of government is to function most effectively. The unusually large number of voters and the fact that there seemed to be litle doubt in their minds regarding how they would vote when they came to the polls on November 4 indicates that they did understand the situation and issues.

We sincerely appreciate your cooperation in presenting the Arlington school issues to the people in your news and editorial columns. We thank you for the effort which your staff put forth to understand Arlington's school situation, for the sympathetic treatment you gave it, and for the space that you devoted to it.

School improvement is an undertaking in which the full cooperation of all the people is needed. Upon taking office on January 1, 1948, one of our continuing objectives will be to keep the people of Arlington fully informed regarding the school problems and programs to solve them. We hope that you will cooperate with us in reaching this objective as we fully recognize that the press is one of the most important media in developing an informed and interested public.

New Style, Old Game

Now that the hue and cry about the change in the styles of womens' clothing has subsided, and once again that much-maligned, ever-down-trodden person, the American husband, has been forced to dig even deeper, I would like to state what the sum total of my observations have been relative to this much-disputed subject.

The new styles have clearly separated two styles of women, namely, those who have their men and those who hope to snare their men in the near future. The women who have really taken to the long look are mostly from the former category, because their charms have already succeeded in inveigling the man of their choice into matrimony, and they need no longer remain in the keen competition. Those of the female sex who fall into the latter category have been the most adamant in their refusal to be bullied into acquiring a new wardrobe, because, being single and not wishing to remain so, they want to make the most of their charms, and rightfully so, because the only thing that is fairer than a day in June, is the sight of a pretty pair of feminine legs.

Adopting Cities

A lot of people would lke to assist the hungry people of Europe but do not know how to do so. I have an idea that might help them.

Let a survey be made of the cities and towns in Europe, giving the population and possible needs. Assign the cities and towns to towns and cities in this country of a similar population, and let these towns and cities "adopt" those in Europe. The proposition in this country could be handled through organizations such as chambers of commerce, luncheon clubs, women's clubs and the like. Let the plan be publicized and have the cities in this country notify a central office of their desire to participate in the project, and then let them be assigned a city to adopt.

Reserve Components

It has been encouraging to note that in your news and editorial columns during the past several days you have touched upon a subject that is important to our national security, i. e., the present unhealthy state of the civilian components of our armed forces. Considerable attention must be given this subject by our citizens, by our Congress, and by the executive departments directly responsible, if we are to achieve a satisfactory degree of security.

There are a great many misunderstandings concerning America's armed forces; a number of misstatements so often made that unfortunately many accept them as facts. One statement in The Washington Post's account of November 8 of Secretary Forrestal's appointment of a committee to study civilian components, was to the effect that this has been brought on by jealousies or unnatural rivalries among the components—particularly the Organized Reserve Corps and the National Guard.

As a matter of fact, no such jealousies exist to the detriment of national security. I believe that you will find the various components work well and effectively together, and that there has rarely been anything but an amicable difference of opinion concerning the means whereby the ends are to be reached.

The ORC and the National Guard have worked together in our various States and comunities for the welfare of our Nation for many years. They will continue to work together in the years to come, in whatever organizational pattern may evolve as the most effective for the protection of the United States.

"Red Fascism"

I don't want to take up space with any long-winded controversy, but since Professor Quigley has taken me to task in his letter of November 14 for calling him ignorant on the subject of "Red Fascism" I feal a few words of explanation are in order.

First—He didn't pull any punches when he gave Washington Post Reporter Miss Mary Spargo a going-over in his letter of November 1, so I wrote my November 5 letter in the same tone. In fact, it was much milder than his broadside.

Second—Since the two paragraphs of evidence were not published (and Professor Quigley didn't repeat them in his second letter) I can't comment specifically, but I still maintain that the differences between communism and fascism are superficial. I could fill a column with "differences," but the basic workings of the two are so close I don't split hairs over such differences as can be enumerated. The term "Red fascism" doesn't mean that the two are absolutely identical but is a convenient term to indicate their affinity. A thorough job of hair splitting could point out lots of "differences" between Mussolini's brand of fascism and Hitler's.

Third—I can't claim any academic degrees but my qualifications to speak on the subject are based on 17 years study and "hand to hand combat."

Margarine Tax

Thank you for your recent editorial against the margarine tax. It's time someone who has the public ear should protest against the absurd discrimination against oleomargarine—a perfectly wholesome product which, fortified with vitamins, is an excellent substitute for butter.

The cost of butter to many is prohibitive. Persons with discriminating taste enjoy the best brands of clean, carefully-made oleomargarine. For what possible adequate reason can Congress justify itself in trying to discourage its sale by refusing to remove the 10-cent tax on colored oleo? We have often wondered!

No Aid For Chiang Kai-shek

America must weigh carefully what aid she is or is not to give China. Secretary Marshall asks for millions to stabilize China's currency but admits we do not have an overall policy toward that country.

Without a firm, clear policy of what we want to do in China, of what we hope to accomplish, it would be better to do nothing at this time. China, it must be remembered, is not Greece. To the uninformed it may appear that to aid Chiang Kai-shek against the China Reds is to aid King Paul of Greece against the guerillas attacking his government. Nothing could be further from the truth.

China is usually found lined up on the side of America in our disputes with Russia but there are more points of similarity between China's Nationalist government and Russia's than with ours. Chiang Kai-shek, contrary to his own denials, is as much a dictator as Stalin. He also has striking resemblances to Hitler and Peron; he has a consuming lust for power—hates foreigners, as shown in his book, "China's Destiny"—occasionally has fits of rage during which he throws teacups, shrieks and yells a la Hitler—feels he is greater than China—claims those who oppose him personally are traitors to the nation—has his portrait plastered all over China.

Chiang Kai-shek's government is a reflection of himself. It permits one party, the Koumintang; it does not believe in freedom of speech, of press, or of association. It has just outlawed the Democratic League Party, and each month sends hundreds of students, liberals, labor leaders and others offering any criticism of the Nationalist government to China's many concentration camps.

A very important point worth keeping in mind is that the so-called Chinese Communists are not first cousins of the Soviets. American correspondents toured the Communist areas of north China in 1944 and after the war, without finding any material aid from Russia. In fact, Stalin was scrupulously correct in assisting China only via Chiang Kai-shek all during the war. There is no evidence at the moment that Russia is actively supporting any group in China, or that the China Reds are seeking such aid.

On the other hand, if America is now to dump material and money into Chiang's lap—over and above the war surplus already used by Chiang against the Chinese Communists—there is every chance that Russia will feel compelled to funnel aid to the enemies of the Nationalist government. This can lead only to intensified civil war and to a further lowering of American prestige in the Orient. It will place us squarely opposite the dynamic movement in China which is seeking to overthrow feudalism, corruption and intolerable oppression. It will not prevent the changes that are coming to China; it may not even bring delay—but it will undermine our preachings of world democracy and freedom for all.

Washington Calling

Freedom Of Conscience

WE HAVE been told very often that we are today the richest and most powerful Nation in the world. But apparently we do not believe it, for one feels on every hand the kind of fear and distrust that come not from strength, but from weakness.

It has a strange sound, this hysterical clamor. It sounds like the squeaking of a frightened mouse rather than the sure voice of a great Nation.

The fear seems to be based on the threat of communism within the United States. Out of that fear, something very like a witch hunt is developing. And that witch hunt can do infinitely more harm than the splinter of communism which is so small in comparison to the great mass of American loyalty.

It can destroy the heritage of free thought that is at the base of our free society. Already, in Government, methods alien to the American way of life have been applied. Men and women have had their whole future put in jeopardy without being given an opportunity to know the charges against them or to reply to those charges.

NOW, APPARENTLY, this technique is spreading to fields outside Government. In a recent address in Chicago, Clifford J. Durr, a member of the Federal Communications Commission, made a statement that seems strangely to have been overlooked. Condemning the tactics of the House Un-American Activities Committee in its Hollywood investigation, he predicted that radio would be the next "victim." Then he said:

"Already the FBI is furnishing to the commission unsolicited reports on individuals connected with radio, and I can assure you that if you should be told the kind of things contained in many of these reports you would dismiss the information as baseless gossip."

That is an extraordinary statement from a responsible public official. Durr must have made it out of a deep sense of conscience after much soul-searching.

Note the word "unsolicited." It indicates that the FBI initiated investigations and sought to influence FCC decisions by sending reports on certain individuals to the commission. If this is happening, it is something Congress should know about.

The individuals mentioned by Durr are not, I understand, broadcasters dealing with news and opinions. But there is apparently nothing to prevent such an "unsolicited" report on the attitudes of those who deal with opinion and news.

The mere suggestion of such a step would be enough to frighten the timid into curbing any show thoughts that could be judged to fall outside the narrowest traditional mould. The Japanese war lords, when they were building up a war machine for the conquest of Asia, used "thought police." The "thought police" ferreted out those with dissenting thoughts and clapped them into jail.

SUCH A concept is utterly repugnant to us. It violates a deep faith in the right of each man to his own beliefs. But conceivably, if the current jitters are not checked, we could drift into something dangerously like the "thought police."

When the Episcopal bishops met recently they adopted a resolution introduced by Bishop Angus Dun of Washington. It was a noble affirmation of the right of conscience. The resolution said:

"The surest way to fight communism is to work unceasingly at home and abroad for a society in which justice and the dignity of free men are in truth guaranteed to men of every race and condition. An inquisitorial investigation of men's personal beliefs is a threat to freedom of conscience.

"The casting of public suspicion on fellow citizens under the protection of congressional immunity can readily become an offense against God's commandment, 'Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.' We have no defense for those who, while sharing the privileges of our imperfectly democratic society, seek to undermine its fabric. But we hold it to be the duty of every Christian citizen to guard for others the freedom of conscience we treasure for ourselves."

The malignancy of those who would harness all thought to the cause of reaction is illustrated by the attacks on the Federal Council of Churches of Christ because it presumed to concern itself with social and economic questions. It is essential for free men to stand up against those who would circumscribe and even destroy the right of free speech and free thought.

Police As Drivers

An article on Page 6B of The Washington Post of November 9 entitled "Capital Drivers Need a Law Course" is in extremely bad taste. In fact it is a classic example of the pot calling the kettle black.

I am referring, of course, to the fact that those who point the finger should be sure their own doorsteps are clean. It is an observed fact that the Metropolitan Police, directly responsible to Inspector Arthur E. Miller, commander of the Metropolitan Police Traffic Division, and Traffic Director George E. Keneipp, often as not use a traffic signal to indicate a right or left turn. Neither do they make left turns as diagrammed in the cited article.

I observed two more incidents of neglected left-turn signals by police cars last week. I have always believed that those who enforce the laws should set the example. Silly, isn't it?

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Disorders In Western Europe

THE QUESTION of what the Kremlin and its Cominform hope to accomplish by ordering the French and Italian Communists to resort to violence is rather like the question of what the Japanese war lords hoped to accomplish by the kamikaze and Hitler by the Ardennes offensive and the Battle of the Bulge. Certainly for France, and almost as certainly for Italy as well, the objective is not victory in the cold war and the installation of Communist or Communist dominated governments in Paris and in Rome. It is, rather, a desperate attempt to disorganize and discredit legitimate representative governments before the European recovery program can begin to work.

Lippmann

THE NEW strategy is manifestly based on a realization that the Communist Parties in western Europe cannot come into power legally—that is to say by winning a majority of the votes—nor by infiltration, nor by a revolutionary seizure of power as long as the Red Army is pinned down and cannot come to their support. Parliamentary democracy, with all its faults and weaknesses, is too strong for them and stands in their way. Their only hope is to break it down, to render it impotent to govern. This would mean, as they know quite well, that General De Gaulle would come into power in France, and in Italy some sort of neo-Fascist government. Once parliamentary democracy had been broken down, they would be fighting not against democracy, as they are now, but against dictatorships of the right, and might hope to become the rallying point of all the republican and democratic forces of western Europe.

The calculation seems to be the same one as in Germany before the rise of Hitler—when they voted with the Nazis to destroy the German republic. The same unholy alliance against the constitutional order is operating today, and the Kremlin, which seems to forget nothing and to learn nothing, is almost certainly,—against the better judgment of men like Duclos, Thorez, and Togliatti—making the same miscalculation.

FOR THERE is no doubt that in France the beneficiary of these disorders, if they paralyze the government, will be General de Gaulle. At the present time about half of the French parliament is neither Gaullist nor Communist. Out of some 600, the Communists can count on about 180 and the Gaullists on about 150 deputies. There can be no elections in France under the present constitution before May. Having broken violently with the Socialists and the various progressive parties, there is no chance whatever that the Communist Party could be voted into power. But there is a chance, if the disorder becomes great enough, that a sufficient number of the deputies, roughly 330 of them, who are now not for De Gaulle would go over to him; that he could come to power on his own terms; could alter the constitution, organize a new election in the spring, and then govern by decree without much responsibility to or interference from the parliament.

There is also little doubt that if General de Gaulle came into power under these extraordinary circumstances, he would be carried along to measures which, while directed against the Communists, would not be limited to the Communists. His measures would spread far afield and strike in authoritarian fashion at the republic, and at the traditions of democracy and of personal liberty. Whatever the general's own intentions, he has cut himself loose from the restraints of constitutionalism. The momentum of his movement and the circumstances of his accession to power would force him into a path where he would inevitably collide with French democracy. On the backswing from this, the Communists, reinforced by republicans, from whom they are now alienated, might hope to recover some of the ground which they held in 1945, and have been losing ever since.

THOUGH THE situation in France is serious, the Communists—no doubt under orders from Moscow and against the wishes of the native French leaders—may have struck too soon. The constitutional parties, which now extend from the left wing of the Socialists to the stalwart republicans of the right, still have the time, and they are now being given the incentive and the inducements, to save the French republic. The Communists have become openly an instrument of Russian policy. They have resorted to violence. The constitutional parties can now do what, hitherto, only General de Gaulle seemed able and willing to do.

They can use the whole power of the French state against what is now an open conspiracy against it. They can do it with the support of large masses of the working class, and of the great mass of Frenchmen who cling to the republican tradition. They can save the republic, which is in danger, and France from Communist domination, whereas General de Gaulle can only save France from communism by undermining the republic.

FORTUNATELY, there is no longer any doubt as to where the United States Government stands. It stands with the constitutional parties, whatever the composition of the government they agree upon, which entered into the commitments at the Paris Conference that are the basis of the Marshall Plan. Any new political regime, which was no longer founded on indubitable constitutional legitimacy, and was, therefore, not unmistakably bound by the Paris commitments, would confront the American Government with a new situation—one which would require re-examination of the European recovery program.

The decision has been made here. The French people need no longer allow themselves to be misled by the Communist propaganda which cries out that the American Government, because of the obsolescent Truman Doctrine, is secretly supporting General de Gaulle. It is not. Nor should the general be misled into thinking that the Marshall Plan is a scheme for subsidizing the division of Europe and the polarization of all the European countries into irreconcilable factions.

THE Marshall Plan reflects, not the opinion and ideologies of men but, the realities and necessities of Europe. It is a mighty engine designed to recreate the unity of Europe, and heal its divisions, and in the end to restore peace. The Marshall Plan is, of course, incompatible with Communist conspiracies against public order. It is also incompatible with adventures of any kind which would rupture the bonds of legality and constitutional legitimacy.

For in supporting the plan the American people hope and believe that they may be able to provide to all the people of Europe, and to men of good will in all parties, the inducement of hope and the material means to knit together once more the torn fabric of the European community.

Contempt Citations of Ten In Film Quiz Are Approved

The House Un-American Activities Committee yesterday unanimously approved contempt citations for 10 Hollywood writers and directors, clearing the way for the House action next Monday.

The 10 Hollywood notables cited for contempt of Congress for refusing yes or no answers to the question, "Are you or have you been a Communist?" appealed yesterday to all House members to vote down the citations.

"It is not too late for Congress to undo the harm which has been done it and the American people," they said in an open letter.

The House previously has approved all contempt citations requested by its un-American Activities Committee. When such citations are approved, they go to the United States attorney for prosecution in behalf of Congress.

Meanwhile, Representative Bonner (D., N. C.) resigned yesterday from the committee, explaining he wanted to devote more time to his other committee assignments.

Legislation to outlaw the Communist Party in the United States was introduced yesterday by Representative William Cole (R., Mo.).

14 Indictments Returned By Fairfax County Grand Jury

Fourteen indictments, involving 15 persons, were handed down by a grand jury yesterday at the opening of the November term of Fairfax County Circuit Court.

All but four of the defendants pleaded innocent when arraigned before Judge Paul E. Brown following the grand jury report.

Willie Jerdan, 37, of Gum Springs, arrested October 17 in the slaying of Edmund C. Proctor, was indicted on a murder charge. Jerdan, however, was absent, having been sent to a State mental hospital for observation following his arrest.

According to police, Jerdan confessed to the Proctor slaying after he was arrested for drunkenness and later led police to a secluded spot near Ft. Hunt where ehe allegedly had buried the victim.

The jury also returned an indictment on a rape charge against Frank L. Ramsey, 23, of Ft. Belvoir, accused of criminally attacking a 15-year-old girl in November, 1946. Ramsey, who also was not present for arraignment, was arrested last July on complaint of the girl's parents, after she identified his, police said, as father of her unborn child.

Others named in indictments handed down yesterday and the charges:

Czechs Arrest 36 in Bohemia On Spy Charges

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Nov. 17 (U.P.).—The Czechoslovak government announced today it had arrested 36 persons in Bohemia and charged them with "esplonage for a foreign power." The communique did not identify the foreign power or the persons arrested.

It said the group had sold information to foreign agents, had armed illegally for "violent acts against the state," had organized illegal frontier crossings for refugees fleeing the country, and had sold information to agents of a "certain foreign country" about a plant "of great importance for the defense of the state."

Full U. S. Staff Will Aid Greece, Tsaldadis Says

Athens, Greece, Nov. 17 (U.P.).—Foreign Minister Constantin Tsaldaris told Parliament tonight the United States has agreed to set up a joint American land, sea and air staff in Greece.

He said the United States also had agreed to appoint American officers to act as observers with the Greek army.

The decision, Tsaldaris said, indicated the United States had decided to safeguard Greece's independence and integrity.

Matter Of Fact

The Night Of The Soul—I

BERLIN, NOV. 16.—In these times, it is sometimes impossible to understand the political process without exploring the dark places of the soul. Precisely such an exploration is necessary, to grasp why the Soviet Union cannot and will not agree to a German peace settlement on terms acceptable to us; and why the Western powers cannot and must not agree to a German settlement on Soviet terms. There is proof enough of these conclusions in the following facts, culled from the vast mass of carefully checked official data available here on the Soviet terror in eastern Germany.

THE IRON FOUNDATION of the iron Soviet control of their zone of Germany is a system of concentration camps more extensive than that established by the Nazis. Some of the old black names recur. Buchenwald, Sachsenhausen and Fuenfeichen are all again in full use, and besides these, there are camps at Jamlitz, Frankfurt on Oder, Turgau, Muhlenberg Elbe, Altenburg Elbe, Buntzen, Altenhain, Oranienburg, Berlin Hohenschoenhausen, Schwerin, Ketchendorf, Doebelin, Unterwellenborn and Freiburg. The smaller camps in this grim roster contain from 8000 to 10,000 men and women. The full-scale establishments of the MVD hold from 15,000 to 25,000 souls. In all, at this moment a population of 200,000 is now contained in these places of death.

Places of death they are, moreover. One camp concerning which reliable figures have been obtained—Ketchendorf, which holds 8000 prisoners—has an average rate of 15 deaths per day. This is about 5500 deaths per year, a death rate rather more than two thirds of the inmates annually.

In the other camps, roughly similar death rates are known to prevail. Thus the Soviet terror quite probably takes an annual toll of in the neighborhood of 150,000 human lives in an area with a population of about 18 million. If the police of New York State annually put to death 100,000 New Yorkers by torture, or exposure or starvation, or all three combined, the situation would approximate that now obtaining in the Soviet zone of Germany.

Nor are these men and women thus condemned to death in life or death itself, the same who are stained with guilt for the second World War. It was two years ago that the Soviets conducted their great roundup of former Nazis, landowners and businessmen. Of those then caught, many have been renazified by the simple expedient of joining the Communist-Front Socialist Unity Party. And of the remainder, the great majority must either by now be dead or transfer ed to the work camps in the Soviet Union, which is the equivalent of the death penalty. The majority of the new population of these places of death in eastern Germany is composed, rather, of Socialists and others who are suspected by the secret police for reasons quite unconnected with the past.

NAMES CANNOT be used, since the intelligence services of the Western powers have learned of individual cases chiefly from the despairing families of the victims. Yet even an anonymous sampling of the stories of the vanished helps to make the black figures on camps and death rates more comprehensible by civilized men.

Seven students prominent at Berlin University as members of the Christian Democratic Party were walking together down the Unter den Linden. MVD agents halted them, placed them under arrest and took them away. They have not been heard of since.

The Landerat of a Thuringian Kreis, a loyal Socialist, resisted the totalitarian tactics of the Socialist Unity Party at election time. He was arrested for "sabotage and corruption." He has not been heard of since.

In Saxony-Ahalt, the Soviet military government ordered local German businessmen to buy building materials and structural steel in the west German zones at black market prices, for the account of Soviet-owned factories. When the goods were delivered, the businesmen were charged with black market operations, prosecuted and heavily fined. The old-fashioned German bureaucrats in the land finance administration ventured to argue that the fines should go into the land treasury. A subordinate escaped to tell the tale. His chiefs have not been heard of since.

In Brandenburg two members of the works council in a factory at Henningsdorf ventured to read a letter to the local newspaper, complaining of the food situation. A little later, they did not come to work in the morning. They have not been heard of since.

BUT NO PURPOSE is served by indefinitely multiplying these brief stories, each one of which conceals a dreadful infinity of ruthlessness, of cruelty, of terror and of heartbreak. Enough has been related to begin to give some insight into the meaning of the night of the soul.

Far East Communist To Set Up 'Cominform'

Shanghai, China, Nov. 17 (U.P.).—Representatives of seven Communist parties decided at a meeting at Vladivostok to create a "Cominform" for the Far East, the Chinese press reported today.

"Communist" parties of China, Korea, Japan, Mongolia, India, the Philippines and Indo-China were said to have participated.

Supreme Court Splits 5 to 4 On Lend-Lease

The Supreme Court split 5 to 4 yesterday in placing more truckers outside the wage-hour law, and in denying the Government damages on lend-lease contracts.

This made five times the judges have disagreed this fall. They have been unanimous only once, so far.

Justice Burton spoke for the conservative majority in holding that the pay and hours of fruck company workmen are to be set by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and not by the wage-hour law. This ruling costs the workmen time and a half pay for overtime. Chief Justice Vinson and Justices Frankfurter, Jackson and Reed joined in the decision.

Dissenting Opinion

Justice Murphy said in dissent that the majority was inviting people to violate the wage-hour law. Black and Douglas agreed with him. Rutledge said, in another dissent, that the majority were not following the court's own reasoning in other recent cases.

During the war the Government made contracts fixing the damages it would claim if goods bought for lend-lease were late, or were not produced. A five-man majority yesterday said this was a "penalty clause" and ordered $14,843, plus interest, that was held up as damages, paid to Priebe & Son of Chicago. The firm was late in delivering dried eggs for shipment to England and Russia.

Other Orders of Court

Other orders of the court yesterday:

Refused to reopen two labor cases for review under the Taft-Hartley Act, which was passed after they were decided;

Gave Government counsel an hour to argue their claim that racial discrimination clauses are against public policy; and

Chemists Sue U. S. For Army's Use Of Wood Patent

Two chemists yesterday sued the government for 6 million dollars on grounds the army used their non-shrink process for woll without permission or payment.

Dr. Leighton B. Smith, research chemist with Lever Bros. Co., and Charles E. Ruby, Boston, Mass., filed a petition in the U. S. Court of claims.

They maintained they invented a process in 1924 which keeps wool from shrinking, and patented it in 1930.

Then,the y said, the Army took it over without permission.

On November 19, 1945, they stated, Lieut Col. S. J. Kennedy told a Senate wool hearing that the Army's Quartermaster Department had developed the shrink-resistant process for wool and claimed it was saving the U. S. $1,500,000 a month.

Their petition added that the Army tried to settle their claims on August 3, 1945, by paying Ruby $3000. This was rejected.

Sumner Welles' column, which ordinarily appears on this page on Tuesday, will be published in tomorrow's issue.

Guard of D. C. To Modernize Air Defenses

Washington's three National Guard antiaircraft battalions—a major component of the air defenses of the Nation's Capital—will be modernized to meet the lightning threat of modern war, it was disclosed yesterday.

Along with other National Guard antiaircraft units throughout the country, the local battalions be made completely mobile—able to move fast under their own power on short notice. Towed guns will be replaced by self-propelled mounts and additional vehicles added.

In addition, the 340th Searchlight Battalion, DCNG, will be reorganized and set up as a special automatic weapons battalion. All searchlights—made obsolete for plane detector purposes by the development of radar—are being withdrawn from the National Guard.

Will Be Converted

Six searchlight battalions, 21 semi-mobile automatic weapons battalions and 24 semi-mobile gun battalions which already have been federally recognized will be converted to mobile gun and automatic weapons battalions as soon as possible.

Ultimately 98 battalions will be effected. No increase in the number of National Guard ack-ack battalions is planned, Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer, chief of the National Guard Bureau, said. However, 2500 additional officers and men will be required to man the reorganized units.

Col. Peyton Nevitt, adjutant general of the District National Guard, said that nearly 25 per cent of the strength of the 260th Antiaircraf Group here has been recruited. The force, commanded by Col. Leroy Mann, has a planned strength of 2000.

To Be Provided with Bofors

The 340th Searchlight Battalion, Nevitt said, will be equipped with 40 millimeter Bofors 50 caliber machine guns. It is the only one of the three units completely organized and Federally recognized.

Both of the other two—the 380th Automatic weapons battalion and the 260th gun battalion—are about three-fourths organized, he stated. The latter is equipped with 90-millimeter guns.

Ex-GI's Death Laid to Police In Line of Duty

Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 17 (AP).—Coroner David H. Atwater today ruled that Roland T. Price, 20-year-old former soldier fatally wounded by police bullets November 6, "came to his death from gunshot wounds inflicted by members of the police department in line of duty."

The Negro youth was shot after police testified, he had threatened to shoot and had made a move as if to pull a gun. Actually, he was unarmed. Six patrolmen testified they almost simultaneously fired.

The Rochester Chapter, Progressive Citizens of America, has asked Governor Dewey to order a special investigation.

can furniture, American literature and American clothes are corrupting the French people."

(Only the Communists are opposing the nation's participation in the United States Marshall Plan for European reconstruction.)

More workers went out on strike. Thirty thousand coal miners walked out in northern France. A millers' strike closed some bakeries. At least 50,000 dock, transportation and industrial workers remained away from their jobs in Marseille. All public service employes threatened to stop work Nov. 21.

A source close to Ramadier predicted Reynaud would take over as Premier by the end of the week, forming a coalition of Socialists, Popular Republicans, Radical Socialists, Independent Republicans and the non-DeGaullist right.

French Reject Soviet Protest on Police Raid

Paris, Nov. 17.—The French government rejected tonight a protest by the Soviet Union against a police raid on a Soviet repatriation center near Paris last Friday evening.

Soviet Ambassador Bogomolov had told Georges Bidault, the minister of foreign affairs, the raid was "a flagrant violation" of an agreement between the two countries.

Bidault in reply accused Soviet authorities of plotting to take three French children, who were staying at the camp, to the Soviet Union, and announced France would take over administration of the repatriation area.

We Want the Public to Know the Facts

In 1946 a provision of the Naval Appropriation Bill forbids the civilian employees of the Navy to strike. This was reaffirmed in 1947 by the Taft-Hartley Bill. We have no quarrel with either of these provisions of Acts of Congress, we never wanted to strike anyway, but in all justice it would appear that in depriving the Government employee the right to use the principal weapon with which he might fight, the Congress accepted an obligation to protect him from the causes which usually lead to strikes. We cannot believe that the Congress took away the weapon in order to take advantage of its employees.

On Oct. 31, the Navy Department announced the long awaited wage adjustments for the per diem employees of the Metropolitan Washington Area. The amount of the increase for the basic trades varies from 1 to 7 cents per hour. At about the same time there were other increases announced for other areas which ran from 17 to 19 cents per hour. Workmen as near as Philadelphia get this higher rate.

For years it has been the boast of the Navy that the best in naval ordnance was produced in Washington and vicinity and the experimental and research work done in the laboratories in and near the District has resulted in the development and protection of many new weapons which are considered by those who used them, second to none. The type of workmen employed in these naval establishments compare favorably with any workmen, anywhere. The Navy's mechanics in this area are insulted by the fact that their skill is not recognized, that after producing and developing the sinews of war, which were tested and proved on the scene of battle, their "know how" is so unappreciated as to result in a wage offered that is less than that offered for common labor in the building trades.

Why the discrimination?

Since the beginning of the war the wages in all naval yards and stations have been stabilized. What was considered a just wage in the West was considered a just wage in the East. Statements emanating from the White House have implied that the wage stabilization policy is still in force. In order to justify the meager increase the Navy Department went back to an antiquated law which was passed in 1862. This law has failed to keep pace with modern trends in labor relations, it entirely fails to recognize the principle of the employee having any say in the decisions affecting the adjustment of his wages. All of the personnel who acted in any capacity in taking the survey or in calculating the results were people whom the Navy states are part of management. The employees organizations were told that "it is the responsibility of management to collect the necessary wage data for any survey."

In any other industry such discrimination would probably have resulted in a strike. We can only protest, let the facts be known, and depend on public opinion to help us. Business men in Washington surely realize that their business opportunities depend to a great degree upon a standard buying power among their present and potential customers. Working people must realize that the existence of a group receiving sub standard wages in their crafts is to promote a form of competition that will threaten their own livelihood. We all must realize that the cost of living, of rearing or maintaining a family according to the American standard, is just as high, or higher here than elsewhere.

We appeal to the residents of Metropolitan Washington, to the suburbanites in Maryland and Virginia, to the visitors in the District at this time, and to the members of the Senate and House of Representatives who are assembled here for the special session to lift their voices with us in protest against this evident discrimination.

This is published by the various trades affected through their representatives whose names and trades follow.

Palestine Accord Gained

regulations, prevent or obstruct any of the acts of the commission, a promise already made.

Elections Provided

If by next April 1, the provisional council cannot be selected or cannot carry out its functions, presumably because of fighting as threatened by the Arab League, the Security Council may take action.

Elections for permanent governments in both new states are to take place before next October 1. Everyone over the age of 18 who is a citizen or files notice he or she intends to become a citizen may vote.

The provisional council will be given the power to establish regulations for immigration and the sale of land, both tightly controlled now by the British. It is expected that the commission will authorize up to 6250 immigrants each month as compared with 1500 permitted now.

Other Activities

Dr. Herbert V. Evatt of Australia, chairman of the committee, said he would recommend that debate on the plan end this Thursday. The Palestine committee will sit in all day and night sessions to speed the last major problems of the Assembly to conclusion. He hoped to have the General Assembly take up the debate next Saturday.

Other United Nations activities today included:

Approval by the budget committee of expenses to hold the 1948 General Assembly in Europe. The vote was 30 to 8.

Approval of an Indian resolution expressing regret that South Africa had failed to act on last year's recommendations for better treatment of Indians. The political committee voted 29 to 15.

Hunter Is Shot By Another for Deer He Bagged

Minneapolis, Nov. 17 (U.P.).—Donald D. Wolfe, 37, was critically wounded by a hunter who apparently thought the easiest way to bag a deer was by shooting a man who already had felled one, police reported today.

Wolfe said a stranger shot him near Isle, Minn., because he wanted the deer which Wolfe had brought down. The wounded man lay in the woods all night before a searching party found him.

B. & O. Outlay Of 250 Million Is Envisioned

Baltimore, Nov. 17 (AP).—President Roy B. White of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad told stockholders today the company should spend more than $250,000,000 for major improvements and new equipment during the next five to ten years.

Speaking at the 121st annual meeting of the B. & O.'s stockholders, White said present net earnings of the company, as well as of railroads in general, are too low to attract the capital required for such an outlay.

He said that, although rail traffic volume is now at a peacetime peak, the margin between income and outgo of the industry is less than 3 per cent.

The B. & O. is spending about 19 million dollars in improvements this year and has placed orders for some $90,500,000 in rolling stock and marine equipment since the war ended, he disclosed.

About 20,000 freight cars have been added since 1940, he said.

During the last 12 months, White reported, 105 industries of major importance have been built or started construction along B. & O. lines.

He said net income for the first ten months of the year was over six million dollars and added that it is likely to be increased somewhat during the remainder of the year.

However, he said that "the return for the year is plainly inadequate to sustain necessary credit and provide a dividend to owners of the property."

New York, Chicago Business Papers Will Be Merged

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—Bernard J. Ridder, publisher of the New York Journal of Commerce, today announced an agreement to merge the New York Journal of Commerce and the Chicago Journal of Commerce.

No change in the editorial policy or management of either paper is contemplated, he added. Each paper will retain its separate identity, and both will use the news-gathering resources of the combined staffs. The merger will become effective "shortly," Ridder said. The Washington staff for the two papers is being expanded.

Bernard J. Ridder will continue as editor and publisher, and Eric Ridder as general manager of the New York Journal of Commerce. John D. Ames will continue as editor and publisher of the Chicago Journal of Commerce.

On the basis of the terms, Ridder stated the price of the Chicago paper at $1,250,000. The merger will bring together the Nation's oldest business newspaper and one of its newest. The New York Journal of Commerce was founded in 1827, and the Chicago Journal of Commerce in 1920.

Meteor Explosion Believed Cause Of Tenn. Flash

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 17 (U.P.).—Scientists estimated today that it probably was a ton-sized meteor which exploded over the mid-State area last night and caused a bright multicolored light reported seen at points as much as 185 miles apart.

Apparently it exploded in the air in the Shelbyville-Manchester area of middle Tennessee. Dr. Carl K. Seyfert, Vanderbilt University astronomer said large fragments probably plunged into the earth.

In Unionville, near Shelbyville, a man reported seeing the light and hearing an explosion and then "smelled powder burning."

Business Outlook

Don't Let Statistics Fool You, '47 Auto Output Is Up to '29

By J. A. Livingston

SO . . . YOU'VE HAD your order in for an automobile for more than a year now, and the dealer hasn't delivered. So . . . that makes the auto industry slow on the uptake. Just a bunch of lumbering big guys, unable to turn around in a crush. Give you the small firm every time. The kind whose management is swift on its feet. That's the way you feel. I getcha.

Livingston

Lot of other people feel the same way. So you're in good company. You've seen the statistics. They sure make the auto industry look bad. Here's the United States breaking all records in production and distribution, and the automobile companies this year will produce only 3½ million passenger cars. Why in 1929, the industry assembled 4 3/5 million passenger cars. Maybe we ought to take up a collection and give Charles E. Wilson of General Motors, Henry Ford of your know what and K. T. Keller of Chrysler a joint medal for taking their time. We'll leave little guys like Paul Hoffman of Studebaker out of this. Yes, also, Henry Kaiser.

THOMAS S. HOLDEN, president of F. W. Dodge Corp., a solid citizen and a man who knows his figures, made you think of this. He told a group of builders in Washington the other day that the home building industry has outpaced the automobile industry in reconversion to date. Said Holden:

"This second full year after cessation of hostilities, housing completions will reach an estimated 85 per cent to 90 per cent of previous peak production. Passenger auto production will be 75 per cent to 80 per cent of its prewar peak."

Well, you're not the kind of fellow to take a man's sayso just like that. Holden might be a bit prejudiced. The Dodge Corp. supplies facts and figures to the construction industry on contract awards. You look up the figures. Yep, Holden's right. Production of passenger cars this year will run to just about 76 per cent of 1929 level. As for building, best year was 1925, when a total of 937,000 houses were started. And this year it looks as if 860,000 new homes will be built. Let's see now . . . 860,000 divided by 937,000 . . . yep, Holden's right again. Looks as if home building will reach 91 per cent, almost 92 per cent, of its previous peak.

Then, suddenly, an idea hits you. What about trucks? You can't leave Mack, Autocar, Reo, or White out of this. You can't measure the auto industry by passenger cars alone. Maybe that will change the picture. Ah, yes, here are the figures. In 1929, the auto industry turned out 771,000 trucks; this year truck production will top 1,200,000. So, you say to yourself, that's different. Trucks are big things. Take more steel, more engine, more man-hours than a passenger car. Especially those big babies they're making today.

OUT COMES your pencil again. Counting in trucks, the auto industry in '47 will turn out 4,700,000 vehicles as against 5,358,000 in '29. That's 87 per cent of 1929. And that makes no allowance for the longer time it takes to turn out a truck, the greater expense. You do some more looking. You get some figures on the value of the automobile industry's output. Admittedly the numbers aren't ironclad. But it leads you to the conclusion that the "amount of automobile" being produced has been underestimated. Motor vehicles, too, are much better than in the '20s or early '30s. More horsepower, more wheelbase, more interior room, better equipment, such as windshield wipers, heaters and defrosters.

Yes, and trucks do all kinds of things. Dump sand, mix cement, even carry derricks. The Department of Labor supports the point. Employment in the auto industry today is 781,000 as against 471,000 in 1929. Man-hours worked might reach 30 million as against 22 million. You're beginning to get a new slant. Looks as if the auto industry really is rolling.

Then you think. But the auto industry's making refrigerators, airplane motors, lots of other things besides cars. Maybe that's why employment's up the way it is. Then you think again. Yes, that's undoubtedly a factor. But not enough of a factor to wash out the man-hour statistics.

SO YOU TAKE another squint at housing. Doesn't look as if we're producing nearly as much house today as in 1925. About a million workmen were employed in homebuilding construction in '25, only about 625,000 today. True, we're getting a little better design in homes. Space-conserving architecture, better insulation. Kitchen fixtures are better. Also heating. No doubt about that. But the method of building is pretty much the same. And the home itself, it's smaller. Yet it isn't as if the building industry's energies were going into big stuff—like warehouses, factories, roads, public works. Department of Commerce statistics show that total construction volume in '47 won't hit 70 per cent of the 1925 total.

So you begin recapitulating. Maybe Mr. Holden was given house building the benefit of numbers. Maybe you snapped at conclusions based on passenger car figures alone. You see now that 1947 will be as big a year as 1929 in total auto output—maybe bigger. As for Wilson, Ford and Keller, you owe them an apology. They can sure turn out cars and trucks. (Don't forget those trucks). And they're doing it!

Work to Start On New Store In Chevy Chase

By S. Oliver Goodman

Construction of a new department store in Chevy Chase at the corner of Connecticut and Idaho aves., will be started immediately, it was formally announced last night.

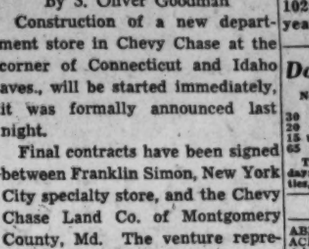

Final contracts have been signed between Franklin Simon, New York City specialty store, and the Chevy Chase Land Co. of Montgomery County, Md. The venture represents a million-dollar investment by both. Upon completion of the building in the fall of 1948, it will be leased by the Chevy Chase firm to Franklin Simon for a 30-year period.

J. Howard Denny, Franklin Simon president, said the new store will be the firm's seventh branch. It will be a two-story Georgian building with parking areas to the rear and at one side. The structure will consist of two selling floors totaling 20,000 square feet plus a basement of 10,000 square feet.

The building was designed by Herbert B. Beidler, Chicago architect, and construction will be undertaken by W. Frank Coleman, Inc., Washington contractor. The store will sell men's, women's and children's apparel. President Denny said it is planned to staff the Chevy Chase store with local personnel.

The Franklin Simon head revealed that this site for a store had been selected back in 1940 but, because of material shortages, building had been delayed until after the war.

Bosox Buy Stephens and Kramer From Browns

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

POVICH

Eight starts Owen's Giants have made in the National Football League this season and their tie game with Boston stands as their peak performance. "Our schedule is very rough, gentlemen," said Owen, "but the football writers could be kinder to me. Why don't you schedule an open date some Monday?" He was grinning.

Mr. Andy Gustafson, Army's backfield coach, reported for West Point, and acknowledged its high pleasure over tying Penn, 7-7 last weekend. "We stopped Minisi and they didn't stop Rowan, and that was the ball game," said Gustafson. "We only got a tie out of it, but at the finish we felt like we had just won a ball game, and the Penn people were reacting as if they'd lost one."

A NOTABLE GUEST was Glenn Scoby (Pop) Warner, of Carlisle, Pitt and Stanford fame. The white-haired patriarch of the coaching profession was neatly introduced by Jesse Abramson of the New York Herald Tribune as "that great coach who invented the single wing, the double wing, and Jim Thorpe."

Warner declined to make a speech. He had some comment though. He saw Sunday's New York Yankees-Los Angeles Dons game, and "it was interesting to see that the pros can make mistakes just like the college boys." He said he didn't like the newfangled rule permitting unlimited substitutions in college football. "It takes the game away from the boys, and makes it a game between the coaches. That's not good."

Jack Lavelle reported for Notre Dame, and declared the Irish had a let-down against Northwestern, after the game with Army. "But when we needed the clinching touchdown we got it easy." Asked for the comment of Head Coach Frank Leahy, Lavelle admitted: "I haven't talked with the master since the game. He left orders barring me from the dressing room, which I agree is the biggest public improvement since the subway."

DUDLEY De GROOT, who watched his Los Angeles Dons take a 16-13 beating from the Yankees on Sunday, was introduced as the only doctor of philosophy among the big league coaches. "Somehow, though, it hasn't helped me to take my six defeats philosophically," he said. "I never have learned, yet, how to like getting beat."

De Groot ventured the opinion that the Yankees would beat the Cleveland Browns on Sunday in the All-America Conference's big game of the week. "Of course, I must like the Yankees, after what they've done to my club, and we've beaten Cleveland two times in three games. Naturally, the Yankees look tougher to me."

Before he was dismissed in favor of Yankee Coach Ray Flaherty, De Groot was thrown a curve by President Abramson who put the question: "Are you stepping out as coach of the Dons at the end of the season?" Said De Groot, brushing it off, "I don't know." But it's the latest rumor in the coaching business.

CLIFF BATTLES, the old Redskin, reported that his Brooklyn Dodgers are doing better. "It was nice beating Baltimore last weekend, but I don't know how we'll make out against the Dons next week. Right now I'm trying to install something new in the way of a short pass to use against the big Los Angeles club. Nothing elaborate, just a short little touchdown pass that will give us a nice lead to protect."

To Ray Flaherty, coach of the Yankees, the weekly question was inevitably put. Who does he consider his most valuable player—Buddy Young or Spec Sanders.

Flaherty fumbled around a bit with his answer. He started to say they were different types of performers and couldn't be compared, and then he said: "I don't know which one of 'em is the most valuable, and as long as I can't tell which of 'em is my best performer, I'm going to be happy about the whole situation."

Sliding Skins Put 3 on Waiver List, Recall Three Farmhands

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Out of National Football League title consideration with four games to play, the Washington Redskins yesterday started planning for '48 by putting three players on the waiver list, promising to recall three more from their Wilmington farm, and putting into effect several switches in the middle of their line.

On sale went End John Lookabaugh and Backs Harvey Jones and Vince Pacewic. Lookabaugh will report to Wilmington temporarily.

Returning to the Redskins, but not before Sunday's home stand against the Chicago Cardinals at Griffith Stadium, will be Center "Tuffy" McCormick and Backs Tommy Mont and Jim Hefti.

Changes on Way

As a result of their 38-21 thumping by the lowly Detroit Lions on Sunday, the following changes were expected:

Tackle Fred Boensch, a standout during part of the Lion game as guard, to be permenantly moved to right guard.

What effect all this will have on a team which tosses a five-game losing streak at the west's leading Cardinals is problematic. The Redskins have aces (?) up their sleeve in a pair of new tackles, Don Deeks and John Sanchez, neither of whom have played much because of the improved performances of Don Avery and Ernie Williamson . . . Mont, Maryland's great T formation quarterback, may be groomed as a running and defensive halfback . . . Against Detroit the Redskins screwy and sad department was overcrowded, including: Eddie Saenz, disallowed first-period interception of a pass when Washington was offsides; Jim Youel's fumble on the 30; Jenkins' triple tackle of Kmetovic on a 43-yard pass play; the triple Lion lateral on which George Wilde brought down the first runner, got to his feet and tackled the third and final runner on the 19; Detroit's 75-yard pass play on which veteran defender Aldrich was cought flat-footed by catcher Joe Watt.

Los Angeles, Nov. 17 (AP).—Sid Luckman, the Chicago Bears' T-master, was never cooler, despite all the frayed tempers around him yesterday.

On the Bears' second touchdown march in their 41-21 win over the Rams, Luckman found himself trapped on a pass attempt. As two Rams climbed aboard his throwing side, the right, the veteran quarterback switched the ball to his left hand and completed the pass with a shotput toss to George McAfee. The play gained 14 yards.

Bell Awaiting Report on Fight

Philadelphia, Nov. 17 (AP).—Commissioner Bert Bell of the National Football League said today he is awaiting a written report from the officials of the Chicago Bears-Los Angeles Rams football game before making any decision on a reported fracas.

Five players were ejected for fighting during yesterday's contest at Los Angeles. They were the Bears' Ed Cifers, H. Allen Smith and Ed Sprinkle and the Rams' Mel Bleeker and Dante Magnani.

Anybody Want to Rassle Singh for $100?

Nanjo Singh, the Hindu grappler, yesterday made an offer of $1000 to any spectator who can break his "Cobra Clutch" tomorrow night at Turner's Arena, where he will meet Babe Sharkey, the erstwhile wrestling champion, in the feature attraction.

D. A. Orders Investigation Of LaMotta, Fox 'Bout'

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—In the wake of extremely adverse newspaper criticism and rumors of a "fix" of the Billy Fox-Jake LaMotta fight in Madison Square Garden Friday night, District Attorney Frank S. Hogan and State Athletic Commission Chairman Edward Eagan today announced they would investigate the bout.

Shortly after Eagan announced that he had ordered the purses of both fighters withheld and that the commission would investigate "the circumstances," Hogan said that he would summon the February grand jury to probe the fight which Fox, Philadelphia light heavyweight contender, won by stopping LaMotta in 2:26 of the fourth round.

Reporters Hint at Sham

Hogan said "I have read accounts of the Fox-LaMotta exhibition. The sportswriters, who are experienced observers, are practically unanimous in concluding that it was not on the level, if that is true a crime has been committed. We shall investigate it unsparingly."

Earlier, Eagan said that he had ordered the purses withheld because of "newspaper stories" and that the commission would investigate.

In a statement to the press, Eagan said:

"The New York State Athletic Commission is withholding payment of the purses.

"At present there is no legal evidence that the contest was not honestly fought by both boxers to the best of their ability. The commission will investigate the circumstances and make its determination after such an investigation.

Closed Hearing

At the time of the announcement, Eagan said the investigation would take place as soon as possible and that the hearings would be closed. He had indicated that only the commission would be concerned.

In Philadelphia, Frank (Blinky) Palermo, manager of Fox, declared that his fighter's actions Friday "were above criticism."

"So long as there was so much panning of the fight, we're satisfied to see the commission investigate it," Palermo added. "They might find out something about La Motta's showing that we don't know about, but Billy's showing was above criticism. He fought a smart fight and won on his merits."

LaMotta could not be reached immediately for comment. In his dressing room after the fight Friday, the Bronx battler exclaimed "I was lousy," wasn't I."

He added that "I just couldn't get going."

Odds Suddenly Change

Press criticism of the fight centered chiefly around LaMotta's inept performance, and rumors of a "fix," that followed the strange gyrations of the odds the day of the fight. From the even "pick 'em" figure that had prevailed all week in a heavy betting market, the odds shot up swiftly to 1 to 3 in favor of Fox and it was reported that bookmakers had refused to take bets on the bout from late Friday afternoon on.

The rumors reached Eagan's ears, and before the fight he visited LaMotta's dressing room to advise him of the reports. After the bout Eagan was quoted as saying that it was a sincere fight.

LaMotta, a middleweight who never had been knocked off his feet in 79 fights, was knocked out—on his feet—when Referee Frank Fullam intervened.

The attraction of a knockout puncher and a fighter whose main reputation was built on his ability to "take it" and go on to win, lured a capacity crowd of 18,340 who paid $102,528. Of this the fighters were to receive around $23,000 each.

Waterfield Has Bruised Jaw

Los Angeles, Nov. 17 (AP).—The injury received by Bob Waterfield, Los Angeles Rams quarterback in yesterday's rough Rams-Chicago Bears game, was diagnosed today as a severly bruised joint in his jaw. X-rays revealed no fracture.

The injury was suffered said Snyder when Waterfield was hit by Bear End Ed Sprinkle, one of five players ejected by officials from the free-swinging game, won by the Bears, 41-21.

Let's Give Highs a Lift

All of us have had a lot of fun in the Pick-the-Winners football contest.

With the end of the contest this week, The Washington Post would like to make this suggestion to the thousands of fooball fans who have paricipated in this weekly duel of wits:

Let's turn our attention to the high schools in their biggest game of the year—the grand finale the night of November 28 at Griffith Stadium, featuring McKinley and Central for the interhigh championship.

You can show the youngsters that you are just as interested in them as you are in college games by purchasing tickets to their crowning game of the year.

The Community Chest and the high schools will divide the receipts. Let's make it a wonderful night for the kids, charity and the schools.—Bus Ham, Sports Editor.

Chip Removed From DiMag's Arm

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 17 (U.P.)—Joe DiMaggio, start centerfielder for the New York Yankees, had a bone chip removed from his right elbow today by Dr. George Bennett at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Bennett said the operation was successful and DiMaggio will be released in a week but with orders to take it easy for a month.

Hogan Demands Showdown

Annual PGA Meeting Opens With Feuding; Pros Anything but One Big Happy Family

Chicago, Nov. 17 (AP).—The Professional Golfers Association, opening its annual meeting confronted by a mess of "family troubles," today announced sponsorship of a 38-tournament program with a total prize list of $550,000 for the 1948 season.

Some 70 officers and delegates sedately pushed int oa routine opening session of a three-day meeting with little official comment on Ben Hogan's demand for a showdown on "utterly false" accusations that he was involved in a "poison pen" movement to unseat President Ed Dudley and a charge by Vic Ghezzi that he was muscled off the 1947 Ryder Cup squad.

Dudley and George Schneiter, chiarman of the player tournament committee, said Ghezzi's protest would be heard by the executive committee late today. Schneiter last night said Ghezzi's public complaining might result in his expulsion from the PGA for breaking the "code of ethics."

The 1948 card for the play-for-play swingers marked a decrease of two tournaments from last year, but the total swag was $42,000 more than the 1947 prize list of $508,000.

Schneiter explained that this was due to the fact that individual tournament sponsors generally had upped prize lists to a $15,000 minimum. He also pointed out that the 1948 program will end October 3 in deference to the football season and weather hazards.

Schneiter indicated that the PGA had made peace with Promoter George S. May of Chicago who feuded with some professionals the past few seasons over wearing numbers on their backs at his All-American Tourney. This year, Schneiter said, number-wearing will be optional in the Tam O'Shanter feature. May has posted a combined prize list of $50,000 for the All-American and international meets which will be dove-tailed at Tam O'Shanter in Mid-August.

Hogan charges that Corcoran instigated false rumors that he was alligned with Dick Metz and Horton Smith in a faction to knock Dudley out of the presidency and replace him with Smith and also that Hogen was miffed because "retired" Byron Nelson was named on the Ryder Cup squad. Corcoran has categorically denied any connection with the stories.

Tech, Central Meet Nov. 28 In Big Game

Tickets for the Interhigh football championship game at Griffith Stadium the night of November 28 will go on sale tomorrow at Griffith stadium, the Fairway sports shop and the lobby of The Washington Post.

McKinley and Central, both undefeated in the Interhigh race, will meet in the championship game under the auspices of the Board of Education and The Washington Post.

Tickets will sell for $1.00, $1.50 and $2.00 to the general public with all seats reserved except those priced at $1.00.

Students Tickets 25 Cents

High school students who hold athletic cards will be admitted for 25 cents provided they purchase tickets at their respective schools by November 26, the last day of school before Thanksgiving holidays.

The 25-cent tickets also will be available to athletic card holders at private, parochial and county schools until November 26.

After that date, all students who have not purchased the 25-cent tickets will be required to pay the same prices as the general public.

The Board of Education has appointed Principal Opal H. Corkery, Anacostia; Principal John Paul Collins, Eastern, and Hardy Pearce, athletic director in the public schools, as a game committee.

Schools, Chest Share Receipts

This group met in the editorial rooms of The Washington Post yesterday to outline plans for the season's biggest high school game.

Receipts of the game will go to the athletic funds of the eight Interhighs and to the Community Chest, and it was decided that no complimentary tickets will be issued.

Sports supervisory committee of the various Interhighs will be asked to assist in controlling the crowd at the game. School officials make up these supervisory committees.

The metropolitan police department will be asked to assign a special detail to the game.

The Central and McKinley squads took it easy yesterday. The championship game is the only contest left on the schedule of either team.

We Want Anderson OUT, Say Iowa Students in Poll

Iowa City, Iowa, Nov. 17 (AP). Forty-nine per cent of 2738 students participating in an informal poll today expressed the feeling that the resignation of the University of Iowa's football coach, Dr. Eddie Anderson, should be accepted.

Twenty-four and nine-tenths per cent voted that the resignation should be rejected, and the remainler said they had no opinion.

Tabulation of the vote, sponsored by the student council and with the knowledge of C. Woody Thompson, dean of affairs, came at about the time the board in control of athletics assembled to consider the resignation.

A short time earlier the Iowa City Quarterback Club, composed of sports-minded businessmen, announced it had voted "almost unanimously" in passing a resolution giving Anderson "an almost overwhelming vote of confidence."

High School Ace Scores 202 Points

Oklahoma City, Nov. 17 (AP).—The Oklahoma City Crooked Oak High School football team is claiming the Nation's top prep scorer, 155-pound Frank Silva, who has totaled 202 points his first season as a ball-lugging back.

He has made 33 touchdowns and four extra points. The phenominal senior was a blocking back and did not carry the ball his first two years at Crooked Oak.

Georgetown Frosh Win Over Naval Barracks

The Georgetown University Freshmen rolled over Naval Barracks K, 46-7, yesterday at Georgetown Field. Billy Conn, with two touchdowns, paced the Hoya Frosh to their fifth victory in six starts this season.

Terps Play Colonials, 10 Others in '48

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

MARYLAND'S football team may not be the best in the Nation next year, but it will certainly be one of the busiest if the 11-game schedule now under consideration is worked out.

Although there may be a switch in two dates, 10 games are already definite and the addition of an eleventh is more than a remote possibility.

George Washington, off the Terrapin schdule since 1910, returns in 1948 for a November 6 scrap at Griffith Stadium. The other newcomer is the University of Miami, to be played in the Orange Bowl Stadium October 29. This will be the first meeting between the two schools.

October 23 is currently open, but will be filled by either North Carolina State, with whom the Terps close out their season this year, or William and Mary.

Tentative Schedule:

September 18—South Carolina at College Park.
September 25—At Richmond.
October 2—At Delaware.
October 9—VPI at College Park.
October 16—Duke at Baltimore or Griffith Stadium.
October 23—Open (to be filled).
October 29—At Miami.
November 6—George Washington (at Griffith Stadium).
November 13—North Carolina at Griffith Stadium or Baltimore.
November 20—Vanderbilt at Nashville.
November 27—At West Virginia.

SOUTH CAROLINA is tentatively booked to open the Terrapin slate September 18, but the date may be changed. There's also a possibility of a switch in the October 2 date with Delaware.

Richmond, V.P.I., Duke, North Carolina, Vanderbilt and West Virginia round out the program.

No decision has been reached as to the site of either the Duke or North Carolina games. Both will be Maryland "home" games with one to be played at Griffith Stadium and the other in Baltimore's Municipal Stadium.

"Baltimore wants us over for a game next year," Athletic Director Walter Driskill said yesterday, "and we have agreed to play either Carolina or Duke there."

The Old Liners met George Washington for the first time in 1897. The teams played four other games, ending relations 37 years ago. The series stands at two victories apiece and one tie.

Flyers Face Lions Tonight

Having snapped out of their disheartening losing streak, the Washington Lions will attempt to make it two straight victories when they entertain the St. Louis Flyers tonight at 8:30 on the Uline ice.

Strengthened immeasurably by the return to action of Larry Archambeault and Ken Schultz, Coach Jack Riley's skaters are in a good position to start a climb to the top of Eastern Division standings.

They have had a good rest after the brutal road trip which saw them playing almost every night for a week and are ready to play the hockey that they know they are capable of.

The fine showing made by little Walt Babey at one of the defense posts had enabled Coach Jack Riley to move Archambeault to a wing position. Larry performed well at his new post in the Friday night victory over Springfield and may be a fixture in the front line.

In St. Louis, the Lions are facing a club with two fine lines. Leading scorer and Center Don Grosso teams with wingmen Paul Gladu and Ronnie Wilson on the Flyers' first line, and Henry Backor, John Raynak and Steve Black make up one of the top kid lines in the Western Division.

Other St. Louis standouts are Hec Highton, Bingo Kampman, Hec Pozzo, Eddie Olson, Jack Schewchuk, Waikko Lund, Bill McComb and Doug Lane.

Boston Sends 7 Players And Money To St. Louis

Boston, Nov. 17 (AP).—The acquisition of Shortstop Vern (Junior) Stephens and right handed pitcher Jack Kramer from St. Louis Browns for seven players plus undisclosed cash, estimated at from $50,000 to $100,000, today highlighted Joe Cronin's first public appearance as general manager of the Boston Red Sox.

Smiling broadly and apparently highly pleased with his new job in owner Tom Yawkey's front office, Cronin told baseball writers that the Browns gain immediate possession of Infielder Eddie Pellagrini, Catcher Roy Partee, both with the Red Sox last season, and Pitcher Jim Wilson, Al Widmar and Outfielder Pete Layden, members of the Louisville American Association farm team.

Cronin added that two other Red Eox hirelings will be turned over to the Browns later. He refused to discuss the cash involved but in St. Louis, Bill Dewitt, the Browns' general manager, described it as "a substantial amount."

Third Base Prospect

"Stephens, of course, will be the Red Sox's 1948 third baseman," a writer prompted. "Joe McCarthy will decide that," Cronin countered neatly.

It can be taken for granted, however, that Stephens will be called upon to try to plug the third base gap that has existed since the Red Sox sold Rawhide Jim Tabor to the Phillies in 1944. Stephens alternated between short and third for the Browns in 1945 and appeared at home in each position.

During the past season, Stephens' batting average dropped from .307 to .279 but during his seven years in the American League he has hit effectively against Fenway Park's short left field target.

The strong-armed Kramer, who has a fine assortment of curves, is rated as a "heady" pitcher. He appeared in 33 games for the Browns last season, winning 11 and losing 16, and during his eight years in the majors, all with the Browns, he has gone to the mound 214 times while establishing an all-time 66-81 record.

Pellagrini Weak at Bat

Pellagrini, a Boston-born product who came up through the Red Sox farm system, opened both the 1946-47 seasons as the parent club's third baseman. His fielding and throwing were of big league caliber but his hitting was inconsistent, as his .211 and .203 records attest.

Partee, also a righthand batter, came to the Red Sox in 1943 and never ranked better than a second-string backstop. He clubbed for .281 as a rookie, but hit only .231 last season.

Wilson and Widmar had 4-4 and 8-8 records with Louisville last season when Layden batted .270 for the Colonels.

Kramer appears to be a much-needed member of the Red Sox' 1948 pitching staff, which will continue to be an unknown quantity until definite reports can be made on the ailing arms of such stars as Tex Hughson, Dave (Boo) Ferris and Southpay Mickey Harris. Each of that trio, according to reports, is contemplating surgery.

Terps May Play For Soccer Title

Coach Doyle Royal of the University of Maryland soccer team said yesterday there was a possibility that Maryland would play Springfield (Mass.) College for the mythical national soccer championship.

Maryland defeated Temple, 3-1, Saturday. Temple, with 19 straight victories over a three-year span, was scheduled to meet Springfield.

Maryland, with five victories and a tie with Loyola of Baltimore, closed its regular season Saturday against Salisbury (Md.) State Teachers here.

Peace Harbor Beaten Out By a Neck

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bowie, Md., Nov. 17.—H. L. Straus' March Chick, a busy campaigner, made his twentieth start of year, his third successful one when he came through with a stretch run to win the St. Mary's, feature of the first Monday program of the meeting.

The 6-year-old gelding, well handled by Jockey Carson Kirk, of Silver Spring, Md., won by a neck margin over the Ridgewood Stable's Peace Harbor with Brookmeade Stable's Sun Herod a neck farther back in third position.

A shivering crowd of 7000 installed March Chick, second choice to J. Newmeyer's Shako, and backers of the winning son of Milkman collected at the rate of $7.80 for each $2 investment. With the track labeled "good," March Chick was clocked in 1:48 1/5 for the mile and a sixteenth.

Kirk Rides Well

Kirk rode confidently aboard March Chick. He rated the veteran in the early stages while Sun Herod and Shako wrestled for the lead with the former finally drawing out to set the pace.

Approaching the stretch, Peace Harbor moved up on the outside and joined Sun Herod and Shako in a three way struggle. Sun Herod got out of control of Apprentice C. Martens and bore out, carrying Peace Harbor and Shako with him.

Kirk, moving wide, saw this action and ducked his mount to the inside to save ground. Both Peace Harbor and Sun Herod regained momentum but Shako faltered. In the final drive, Kirk brought March Chick along the inside rail and the gelding was up in the concluding strides.

Kirk Wins Again

Kirk, who was in the money but could not win in the early stages of the program, rode his second winner in a row in the seventh race. He was aboard H. Hessy Miller's Hearth Mouse and took the 4-year-old to the top at the break and stayed there.

The program was a costly one for the Brookmeade Stable. They lost a promising 2-year-old when King's Bowl, leading the field in the fifth race, broke his right front leg approaching the stretch. A veterinarian humanely destroyed the son of King Cole. This race was won by Mrs. M. E. Murphy's Okamsel, a $29 shot.

Cloud Only 6 Points Behind Gambino in Scoring Race

Richmond, Va., Nov. 17 (AP).—Just about the time everybody agrees that this year's Southern Conference individual point-making race will be won by Maryland's Lu Gambino, star halfback from Baltimore, William and Mary's Jack Cloud comes flying along.

That was the situation today. Gambino, who was ahead in the scramble a week ago by 30 points, still led after last week's contests had all been played, but Lu's margin had been sliced to only six points.

Gambino, unable to score as were the rest of the Terps in Saturday's 19-0 loss to North Carolina, led the league scoring with 84 points, while Cloud, who tallied four times in William and Mary's 45-6 triumph over Washington and Lee, had 78.

In third place were Jim Reynolds, Clemson back, and Ray Beasley, Virginia Tech halfback, each with 42 points. Stanley Magdziak, the William and Mary kicking and passing specialist, had 40 points, 28 of them from placements after touchdowns.

The Southern Conference gets down to its most serious business of the campaign Saturday when North Carolina meets Duke at Durham, N. C., to determine the 1947 league champion.

Duke's Blue Devils, currently leading the loop with three victories and a tie, can win the title by beating the neighboring Tar Heels. If Duke loses, William and Mary's Indians could take the crown by downing the University of Richmond in their Thanksgiving Day contest at Richmond.

Southern Conference scoring leaders:

Players	G	TD	PAT	FG	TP
Gambino, Maryland	8	14	0	0	84
Cloud, William and Mary	8	13	0	0	78
Reynolds, Clemson	8	7	0	0	42
Beasley, Virginia Tech	8	7	0	0	42
S. Magdziak, Wm. & M.	8	2	28	0	40
Harrington, Wash. & Lee	9	6	0	0	36
Gage, Clemson	8	5	0	0	30

Tech Harriers Win

Fulks Plays Against Caps

Joe Fulks and company pay a visit to Uline Arena tomorrow night, opposing the Washington Caps in a Basketball Association of America game at 8:30.

Fulks is the man who led his Philadelphia Warriors to the league championship last year, setting a new individual pro scoring record of 1389 points.

The Caps won their opening game from the Baltimore Bullets last week, but lost consecutively to the New York Knickbockers and Boston Celtics.

The Warriors, led by Fulks, have swept their first two starts from the Celtics and Providence Steamrollers.

Fulks compiled a number of amazing pro basketball scoring records last season. He scored a grand in adidtion to his points total. He also had the most goals, 475; most fouls, 439, and most points in a single game, 41, against Toronto.

Bones McKinney, Washington's combination forward and center, probably will be assigned the job of covering Fulks tomorrow night. McKinney both outscored, and outplayed, the Philadelphia ace on several occasions last season, and has asked for the assignment again tomorrow.

Former Jockey Eddie Smith came out for the Monday program to visit with friends and was put to work as an outrider. He took the place of Joe Day who has caught the mumps from his youngster. Alan Clarke is going to send his Fritz Maisel after the big dough in Wednesday's Breeders' Stoke. "He's a big league horse named after a big league ball player," says Clarke. In Wednesday's Burch Memorial, the Shamrock Stable has Air Patrol with 124 pounds and Little Harp with 102 pounds. They are high and low weights and both have won previous races here. Jockey R. J. Martin left for Florida and hopes to sign with the Bomar Stable for the winter. Ed Christmas will winter the W. L. Brann horses, including the mighty Gallorette, at the Laurel track. Judy Johnson, who saddled T. T. Mott's Pebalong winner of last Saturday's Virginia Mayo purse, will send the horse after the $20,000 added Bryan and O'Hara on closing day. By the way, Miss Mayo, the movie star, deserves credit for showing up in the horrible weather last weekend to present the trophy. Terps Take Cross-Country

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 17 (AP).—The University of Maryland scored an overwhelming victory to take the Southern Conference cross-country championship at a conference meet here today.

The strong Maryland team snatched the crown from the University of North Carolina's defending champions as two Maryland freshmen, Bob Palmer and Jim Umbarger, finished one and two, respectively. Seven of the eight-man Maryland team were among the first 15 to finish.

VPI was second and Duke was third.

There were 65 runners entered, making it the biggest cross-country meet in conference history. A crowd of approximately 1000 turned out to watch the start and finish of the running.

Palmer, in finishing first, set a new conference record as he ran the 4.1-mile course in 21 minutes and 22 seconds.

Team scores for the meet were: Maryland, 24; VPI, 73; Duke, 87; N. C. State, 103; VMI, 135; Davidson, 144; North Carolina, 181; William and Mary, 200; South Carolina, 226.

Out Fishing . . .

By Jack Bell

Extension of stake fish nets to the 60-foot depth contour line of Chesapeake Bay bordering the shores of Accomac and Northampton Counties in Virginia, is being bitterly opposed by sportsmen and conservationists of Maryland.

Letters of protest by individual sportsmen; the Maryland Tidewater Fisheries Commission; League of Maryland Sportsmen; Sportsmen's Luncheon Club; Maryland Commercial Fishermen's Association and many other groups have been sent to the United States Army Engineers Committee, composed of Col. D. G. White, Washington, D. C. District; Col. W. W. Wanamaker, Baltimore District, and Col. George T. Derby, Norfolk District.

Of utmost importance to commercial and sports fishermen on the upper reaches of Chesapeake Bay and the Potomac River, this question has been hanging fire since spring.

The matter was first brought up by two fishing concerns when they filed applications with the United States Engineers for permission to extend their nets to the 60-foot depth.

If present restrictions are relaxed and nets permitted at greater depths thereby narrowing the channel across Chesapeake Bay and retarding the movement of migrating fishes, our future supply would be endangered.

Even under present restrictions, netting has increased since beginning of the war, while the total catch is falling off. It is a wonder, when one sees the great number of nets in the bay, that any fish now escape being caught.

The United States Engineers, charged only with safety to navigation, are not concerned with natural resources. That an issue so vital to our natural resources should be decided on the basis of shipping safety only, is incredible.

A matter of such import should be decided jointly by the tidewater fisheries commissions of both States, who are concerned with fish conservation, and the United States Engineers, charged with safety to navigation.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

President's Program Seen Providing Jobs For Tens of Thousands

This city is headed for another boom reminiscent of wartime days if the President's program to control inflation and to provide foreign relief is enacted into law. A top Federal official who worked on the program flatly predicts:

"Thousands, if not tens of thousands, of new Federal workers will be needed to make the President's program effective." He then estimated:

That a minimum of 35,000 new full-time employes plus thousands of volunteer workers would be required the country over to administer price, wage, rationing, allocation and inventory controls as suggested by the President. This official foresaw the creation of a new Federal agency to lead the fight against further inflation.

That thousands of additional employes would have to be hired by Agriculture, Interior, Commerce and Treasury to handle controls and restrictions at the direction of the proposed new anti-inflation agency, an arrangement with the old-line agencies similar to that used by the old War Production Board during the war. And finally:

That thousands of new Federal workers here and abroad would be needed to administer the Marshall Plan to rehabilitate the free countries in Europe.

This official explained that it took 500 people during the war merely to allocate steel. Also, that OPA alone had a peak of 70,000 full-time employes to ration and fix prices with the help of Interior on coal and oil and Agriculture on food.

The new anti-inflation agency being talked about in Administration circles would be a combination of half dozen wartime agencies such as WPB, OPA, Office of Defense Transportation, War Labor Board, etc.

In addition, Agriculture would have to resume some of its old War Food duties, Federal Reserve and Treasury would have to control credits, the Commerce Department would expand its export controls, Interior would have to revive its oil, gas, and coal divisions, etc.

One thing is sure—the problem of finding jobs for the 1700 displaced career employes here would disappear overnight if the President's program is voted. Many of these 1700 worked in the war agencies which were prematurely closed.

The big problem facing the Government would be to find the office space and competent people to administer all the controls suggested by the President. Many of the former warworkers would be reluctant to return to Government work at the present salary scales.

The President's program, if approved, could very well have the effect of delaying the return here of the half a dozen Federal agencies that were transferred during the early war days to make room for the new war agencies. What office and housing space that's available will be needed for the anti-inflation and the European relief and reconstruction programs if Congress approves them.

ARMY: Secretary Kenneth C. Royall took a crack at the $10,000 pay ceiling on Federal officials in a speech last night before the Economic Club in Chicago. He said he was finding it difficult to find competent people for top-flight jobs because of the salary scale.

"Those whom he would choose for these tasks find no attraction in a salary of $10,000—or even $15,000. If they serve, they must do so at a financial sacrifice. Understandably many are loathe to do this."

Food Conservation at Jefferson Junior High

The Washington Post

EAT EVERYTHING ON YOUR PLATE!—Or words to that effect, are coming from Jimmy Rhinehart, 15, of 508 6th st. sw. at microphone, center), Student Council president at Jefferson Junior High School, as he gives a pep talk on food conservation to students in the school cafeteria. Such talks will begin all lunch hours there for the duration of the emergency. Girls about to be seated are Emily Fugitt, 1400 1st st. sw., at left, and Barbara Norfolk, 614 10th st. sw.

Warren Asks Review of GSI, Clarifying Law

Comptroller General Suggests Trying Out Different Management

Comptroller General Lindsay C. Warren has asked Congress to make a complete review of Government Service Incomporated and to clarify by a new law GSI relations with the Government.

Warren's request was contained in 190-page report on a General Accounting Office audit of GSI operations from January 1, 1927, to December 31, 1945.

While declaring that GSI has been "reasonably well conducted," Warren suggested that Congress consider these alternatives for future handling of GSI cafeteria and recreational activities:

1. Let GSI continue its present operations under a new contract with the Government which would clarify duties and responsibilities on each side.
2. Turn over present GSI contracts to another or several new contractors.
3. Set up a Government corporation to run GSI activities.

4 Million Profits Shown

Warren also said Federal officials responsible for control and assignment of space in Government buildings should not be eligible to serve on GSI's board of trustees.

Warren's report said that for the 18-year period covered in the audit, GSI grossed 89.9 million dollars, of which 77.6 came from cafeterias, 10.5 million from newsstands and soda bars, and 5.8 million from park, recreation, and other activities.

The net income, after direct payments to some Government agencies, totaled $4,058,983 to December 1, 1945. He said the Government's share of the net profits was $1,897,991.

Contributions to welfare totaled $281,170. Total surplus on December 1, 1945, was $1,927,494. On December 31, the unpaid part of the Government's share of profits totaled $478,124.

Newsstand Man Overpaid

The report said that GSI had paid a coffee shop and a newsstand manager $10,702 more than they should have had, and that the Government's share of that would be $5351.

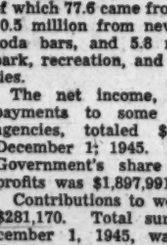

The report termed "improper" a recent action of the Federal Works Administrator in allowing GSI to offset a loss for 1946 against profits for 1945 and expected profits for 1947.

The report said that GSI had invested $133,671 and sustained operating losses of $82,610 on a contract with the Tennessee Valley Administration to furnish recreational services at Fontana Dam in North Carolina. This was out of line, the report said, with a policy to make GSI park and recreational facilities self-sustaining.

The report also said the Washington Tourist Camp had been a major source of funds to cover losses in other recreation services.

Former Chest Official Secretary-Treasurer

Herbert L. Willett, jr., former director of both the Washington Community Chest and the Chest Federation, yesterday was appointed secretary-treasurer of Government Services, Inc.

Willett

Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, GSI president, said Willett's appointment was "the last contemplated by the board of trustees" incident to the recent resignations of Frank W. Hoover as general manager and secretary and Samuel Goodacre as treasurer.

Willett's new post was created by a merger of two positions left vacant by Hoover and Goodacre. Promotions of Robert R. Ayers as general manager and Raymond D. Lewis as associate general manager were announced last week. All appointments are effective December

Study Course at Jefferson Helps Food Saving Campaign

A study course emphasizing nutrition and food savings is giving Jefferson Junior High School's 500 students an opportunity to do their share.

James E. Colliflower, chairman of the District Citizens' Food Conservation Committee, yesterday cited the school's plan as one of the many ways District schools are helping in the food conservation program.

Under guidance of Principal Hugh S. Smith, the program integrates directives and instructions in study courses.

Mrs. Elsie Davidson, head of the home economics department, allows her students to originate ideas for conservation posters. Art students complete the poster.

So firmly has the idea taken hold, food waste in the cafeteria has "been cut to a negligible amount," Mrs. Mary Hart, cafeteria manager, reported.

Student Council President James Rhinehart announces the latest food saving news over the cafeteria loudspeaker, reminding students of meatless Tuesdays and eggless Thursdays.

Meanwhile, formation of a conservation program to be carried directly to the housewife got under way.

The home economics committee of the District Conservation group met yesterday to map the program which will emphasize food saving possibilities in planning meals.

Chairman of the committee is Mrs. Milton E. Miles, District nutrition specialist for the American Red Cross.

Hospital Board In Alexandria to Discuss Survey

Alexandria Hospital's board of directors will meet this afternoon to discuss a survey report released Saturday sharply criticizing the hospital administration.

David C. Book, board chairman, said he did not know whether the board would agree on another proposal for the city's consideration on rates to be charged for welfare patients. R. Samuel Luckett, chairman of the City Council committee dealing with hospital affairs, said his group will act only in response to a hospital offer.

The hospital survey, made by Dr. Joseph Clemmons of New York, was designed originally to work out a compromise between city and hospital on a daily rate for indigent patients.

Food, Clothing Money Collected 6 For Foreign Aid

Seven truckloads of clothing and food for foreign relief had been collected as of yesterday by Seventh-Day Adventist youths in the Takoma Park-Silver Spring area.

Some 1000 youths canvassed the area Saturday and Sunday to obtain promises of donations. Trucks picked up the donations yesterday. In addition to clothing and food, $1000 in money was received.

Students of Sligo Adventist Elementary School turned in 1500 articles of clothing collected in an independent drive.

Va. Urged to Expand Public Welfare Study

Richmond, Va., Nov. 17 (AP).—Dr. E. W. Gregory, head of the sociology department at the University of Richmond, called for further study of public welfare in Virginia today in an address before welfare workers from 29 counties and four cities in this area.

Describing the Mitchell Commission which completed a study in September as being "handicapped by lack of time and inadequate study," Dr. Gregory lauded its report which he said spurred State interest in welfare problems.

He warned that the State would face another crisis in relief administration unless the next session of the legislature passed a deficit appropriation to cover the remainder of this fiscal year. Funds totaling $250,000 made possible funds, and a $100,000 authorized deficit, may last no longer than next February, he stated.

Gallinger Asks For Equipment And Personnel

A new request for additional personnel and equipment in the psychopathic division of Gallinger Hospital will be delivered to the District Health Officer, Dr. George C. Ruhland, today.

The request will emphasize, in layman's language, the need for such improvements in the hopes that Congress will act favorably on the budget requests, Dr. Alvin R. Sweeney, Gallinger Hospital superintendent, said last night.

After checking Dr. Sweeney's report, Dr. Ruhland is expected to forward it to the District Commissioners who are preparing budget recommendations. Yesterday Dr. Sweeney submitted a report, but it was returned to him with a request for greater detail in explaining the need for added manpower.

Dr. Sweeney said he will ask for additional occupational therapists, psychiatrists, student and graduate nurses, hospital attendants and a physio-therapist.

The equipment requests will include beds, mattresses and room furnishings, Dr. Sweeney said.

The hospital recently has been under fire for manacling patients. Dr. Ruhland said the granting of additional personnel and equipment would end the practice.

Court Jails 2 Women for Having Knives

Prison, Not Fines, Ordered by Judge Scott, as Promised

Judge Armond W. Scott sent two women to jail yesterday as part of a promise that hewould no longer offer the alternative of fines to persons convicted of carrying deadly weapons.

The Municipal Court judge delayed similar sentencing in three other cases until December 2 to permit investigation by probation officers.

Sentenced were Geraldine Gravette, 19, of 933 26th st. nw., described by arresting officers as a "one woman crime wive," and Mary Williams, 24, of 1424 T st. nw., who police said menaced restaurant customers with a knife.

Sentencing was deferred on Charles E. Hinderlighter, 18, of the Army War College, found guilty of carrying a hidden gun, and James William Green, 26, of 907 7th st. se., and Richard B. Thomas, 26, of 1362 K st. se., both charged with carrying guns, after their arrests for tampering with an automobile.

The Gravette woman drew 120 days in jail on the weapons' charge after it was testified police found a knife on her person following her arrest for assault on Joseph Gowdy, 50, of 902 3rd st. sw., in an alley near her home last Saturday.

She also was given 120 days on the assault charge and a third 120 day sentence for larceny following the assault.

To two other charges of throwing a can through the window of the store of Benjamin Zevin, at 1224 7th st. nw., on November 13, and subsequently threatening the proprietor, Judge Scott set a $250 fine for destroying public property, or another 120 days in jail, and $500 bond to keep the peace, or 60 more days in jail.

"This is the largest aggregate penalty I have ever meted out from this bench, and this woman fully deserve it," Judge Scott declared.

Police described her as the "ringleader" of a riot among inmates of the National Training School for Girls last March.

The Williams woman was given 90 days in jail after denying the charge of carrying a knife. Two patrons of the restaurant, at 1904 17th st. nw., testified she threatened them with it and dropped it when police entered.

McCracken Is Appointed To Fire Chief Trial Board

To Hear Charges Against Fire Chief Murphy

Joseph A. Wilner W. P. McCracken, Jr. Austin Canfield

The District Commissioners yesterday named William P. McCracken, jr., former Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aeronautics, as the third member of a special trial board to hear charges that Fire Chief Clement Murphy demoralized his department.

The Commissioners also confirmed the appointment of Austin F. Canfield and Joseph A. Wilner as the other members of the board. No date has been set for the hearing nor has any one of the three been named chairman of the panel.

The Commissioners previously announced the public hearing would begin as soon as the specific charges against the fire chief were prepared by Assistant Corporation Counsel Daniel B. Maher. Maher is now studying a report on the charges prepared by the corporation counsel's office.

Canfield, who is general counsel for the Peoples Life Insurance Co., is a past president of the District Bar Association and a former official of the Chevy Chase Citizens Association.

Wilner, a merchant tailor, has been president of the Adas Israel Congregation at 6th and I sts. nw. for the past 20 years and is a past president of the Jewish Social Service Agency and the District Grand Lodge No. 5, B'nai B'rith. He is a member of the District Bar and was a member of Selective Service Local Draft Board No. 1.

Investigating officers testified the fatal accident occurred on New Jersey ave. at P st. nw. at about 12:30 a. m., November 9. Armory Dispute Costly to District

Conventions Would Bring 6-10 Million In Business, Says Trade Board Head

The current squabble over control of the District National Guard Armory is depriving Washington of between 6 and 10 million dollars' worth of business a year.

So said John A. Reilly, Washington Board of Trade president, last night as he urged the District Commissioners and D. C. National Guard Commander Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox to "get together and settle their differnces."

"As long as they continue to argue over who shall control the armory," Reilly said, "we're losing money in all the conventions that could be held there."

Bill Pending In Congress

The Commissioners have argued that the city should get some return on nonmilitary events held at an armory for which it spent money to build. General Cox has repeatedly refused to turn over such funds, contending that present laws place full control of the armory in the hands of the guard.

The Commissioners have a bill pending in Congress to affirm their control over the building.

"We don't care who has control," said Reilly, "as long as there is one authority with whom people can deal in arranging conventions."

An editorial in this month's Board of Trade News urged "some interim agreement" between the Commissioners and Cox, declaring:

"Right now local taxpayers are worse off than they were before the armory was built. They have invested almost three million dollars in it, are getting no return on their money and spending a quarter-million dollars a year maintaining it."

City's Need Emphasized

Reilly said he felt "there is no question about the Guard's right to have the space for its own affairs. But when they're not using it, there's no reason why it cannot be used for conventions."

The Board of Trade editorial emphasized that Washington has had "a real need for a large indoor area where civic gatherings could be held."

Reilly said he had no solution himself to the long-standing controversy, but suggested:

"There is a solution, if only they would get together and compose their differences."

He expressed little enthusiasm for Cox's proposed three-man management commission, representing the Commissioners, the Guard, and the Board of Trade.

"I'd hate to be that man from the Board of Trade," Reilly said. "He would be in a bad spot."

On Thursday, Smith continued, Masterson began to beat him with a club and tried to push him over a railing at the top of the steps at Maguire Hall.

Unsuccessful in an attempt to get away, and fearful of the 12-foot drop from the railing, Smith said he pulled out a penknife and slashed at his assailant.

"I thought he would go away if I threatened him with the knife," he testified. He said he kept a knife for cutting open parcels at the dining hall.

Bates Would Probe School Building Plans

Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.) said yesterday Congress should investigate the District's policy on abandoning school buildings.

Bates is chairman of the House District Fiscal Affairs subcommittee, in charge of city tax legislation.

He said the present building needs of the schools furnished good reasons to see if present school buildings can be reconditioned to meet the demand for a fraction of the cost of a new building.

Within the past two weeks, Superintendent of Schools Hobart M. Corning has called for abandoning five school buildings.

They include the Lincoln, 3d and C sts. ne.; Hamilton, 1611 Bladensburg rd. ne.; Dent, 2d st. and South Carolina ave. se.; Hilton' 6th near B sts. ne., and Corcoran, 28th near M sts. nw.

Lincoln and Hamilton would be returned to the District for other use; Dent would be used a repair shop, and Hilton and Corcoran would be used for storage space.

Bates agreed that new schools are needed in some areas of the city where population has grown rapidly in recent years, but he cautioned that "every school building ought to be fully utilized before we think of undertaking any prodigious school construction program."

Safe Containing $800 Stolen From Office in Herndon

Herndon, Va., Nov. 17 (Spl.)—Thieves who removed a safe from the local branch of the Murphy and Ames lumber company over the weekend escaped with nearly $800, company officials said today.

He notified police, who in turn informed the firm's manager, Harper Graves, after papers in the safe identified it as the company's property.

Fairfax police said the thieves had entered the office by forcing the front door and after removing the safe to an area three miles away, jimmied it open. Tactics employed by the yeggs indicated the job was done by the same gang responsible for a wave of similar robberies in the northern Virginia area in the last six months, police said.

Ship Steward Accused in Actress' Death

Southampton, England, Nov. 17 (U.P.).—British actress Eileen Gibson was murdered by James Camb, 31, a deck steward of the liner Durban Castle, who pushed her unconscious through a porthole within minutes after a love scene, British Prosecutor E. G. Robey charged at Camb's preliminary hearing on murder charges today.

Robey said Camb admitted visiting 21-year-old Miss Gibson in her cabin on the night she vanished after attending a gay dancing party.

"I got into bed with her consent and intimacy took place," Camb's statement said. "She suddenly clutched me, foaming at the mouth. I felt for her heart beats, but could not find any. I was panicked. I managed to lift her to a porthole and pushed her through."

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 17 (AP).—Two Mexicans who found the rigors of a mountain snowstorm too much for them, were being held in the Allegany County jail today after they told authorities they had entered the country illegally.

Their teeth chattering from the cold, the Mexicans surrendered at Westernport, Md., where police identified them as Joseph Martinez, 28, and Benjamin Zarate, 21.

Congressman Flies in for Session

The Washington Post

Engle Is First Congressman To Pilot Airplane Across U. S.

Representative Clair Engle (D., Calif.) swooped down at Hybla Valley Airport yesterday with the distinction of being the first congressman to pilot his own plane across the United States via Skyway No. 1.

Taking off from his Red Bluff, Calif., home Thursday morning, pilot Engle made the trip in 27 hours and 15 minutes actual flying time, arriving for the opening of the special session.

Bothered a bit by cold weather, he made stops at Tucson, El Paso, Midway, Tex.; Montgomery, Ala., and Greenville, S. C. Highest altitude he reached was 7000 feet.

The flying congressman praised the skyway. "The people who laid it out," he said, "really did a good job of choosing the best terrain."

Although his single-engine, two-seater Luscombe "Silvaire" is equipped with a radio, he flew "contact" most of the way. Good tail winds enabled him to 120 miles an hour.

Skyway No. 1 stretches 40 miles wide from Washington to Los Angeles. Pilots learn their position by visible markers which show the name of a community, an arrow pointing north, latitude and longitude, and an arrow pointing to the nearest airport.

A flyer sice 1940, Engle has several hundred flying hours to his credit. He "stumped" his second California district, which stretches 600 miles from the Oregon line to Death Valley, by air in his last campaign.

Greeting him at the airport were his 14-year-old daughter, Yvonne, and Representative Henry J. Latham (R., N. Y.), president of the Congressional Pilots Association. The group's vice president is Representative Engle.

Weichel Again Demands Russian Shipments End

Chairman Weichel (R., Ohio) of the House Merchant Marine Committee renewed yesterday his demand that the United States "stop shipping verything to Russia" and insist on the return of 95 merchant ships he said were lend-leased to the Soviet.

"It is not consistent with Secretary Marshall's stop-Communism program for us to keep sending supplies to Russia," Weichel said in an interview. He added:

"American-owned ships operated by the Russians are carrying everything imaginable to the Soviet, and are loading at United States ports. Customs has been granting them clearance, apparently by orders of the President himself."

Four Million Cancer Fund Willed Here

Mrs. Mary E. Stewart, District resident for many years, who died at her home, 2030 24th st. nw. last October 16 left four million dollars to fight cancer, it was revealed in her will filed for probate in District Court yesterday.

The fund is to be placed in trust to be used after the death of Mrs. Stewart's sister, Mrs. Daniel B. Devore, 2000 24th st. nw. Mrs. Devore has been named an executor of the fund.

The income from the trust is to be paid to Mrs. Devore during her lifetime. Upon her death it will be used to further research in cancer treatment. According to George Hamilton, jr., attorney for the estate, for the fund is to be used for a nonsectarian orphanage in the event a cure for cancer is discovered and there is no further use for the bequest in that field.

Mrs. Stewart was the daughter of Alexander Stewart, Wisconsin lumberman, who in 1906 was elected to Congress, serving two terms in the House of Representatives. Shortly afterward he built the family home at 2200 Massachusetts ave. nw., which is now the Luxembourg Legation.

Mrs. Devore is the only surviving member of Mrs. Stewart's family.

The total estate was estimated at more than 4½ million dollars. After the four-million-dollar trust fund is arranged, Mrs. Devore is to have the remainder of the estate.

Royalty Sees Gifts, Attends Palace Ball

London, Nov. 17, (AP).—Kings, queens and nobles danced tonight in Buckingham Palace after Princess Elizabeth received guests at a showing of her wedding gifts—a collection court circles said was unsurpassed in the history of modern royal romances in Britain.

And still more presents are arriving. From rare jewels to linen handkechiefs, people of high and humble station have sent Britain's heiress-apparent enough gifts to stock a small department store. No authority would even venture to place a value on them.

Included was a necklace of pea-sized diamonds and rubies, a gift of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth to their daughter for her marriage Thursday to Lieut. Philip Mountbatten. The King and Queen also gave her two strings of pearls the size of small grapes.

Tonight the bride's parents threw as much of a feast as their realm's tight rationing laws permit.

Earlier the bride-to-be received visiting dignitaries and went to one of the largest indoor royal parties since the war. That was held in St. James's Palace where the princess, flushed and smiling, thanked some 2000 persons whose gifts had heaped five rooms of the ancient structure. "They're very lovely," she said again and again.

With the King, Queen and Princess Margaret Rose, she received her guests for tea a few hours after reporters had spent more than two hours at a showing of the 1200-odd gifts.

Slightly tremulous at times—not surprising even for one long schooled in the regal manner—the princess shook hands with hundreds.

The dinner-dance tonight marked the first time the ornate state dining room in Buckingham Palace had been put to use since before the war.

A spokesman said all of the visiting royalty were invited. There now are four foreign kings, five queens and 10 princes and princesses in town.

Baltimore to Vote On Greatest Man In City's History

Baltimore, Nov. 17 (AP).—An effort will be made at the city's forthcoming "150 years of Baltimore progress" show to settle two controversies that have flared intermittently in "letters to the editor" columns of local newspapers for many years.

Two controversial questions: "Name the Greatest Baltimorean, Living or Dead" and "What Does Baltimore Need Most?" will be printed on tickets for the show, to be held during the week beginning December 8.

Ballots will be collected at the door of the Fifth Regiment Armory and results will be made public.

Former Judge Samuel K. Dennis has already come forward with his nomination for the "Greatest Baltimorean" title.

He nominated Maj. Gen. Samuel Smith, commander of the military and naval forces which repulsed the British in the battle of North Point and bombardment of Fort McHenry in 1814. Smith again earned the label "Savior of the City" when he restored order here after rioting broke out after the Bank of Maryland failed in 1835.

Police Society To Elect Tonight

The Policemen's Association will meet tonight at 8 o'clock at Odd Fellows Temple, 415 7th st. nw., for the annual election of officers.

Balloting has been scheduled from 6:30 to 10 a. m. and from 2 to 4:30 p. m. in the precinct stations and at headquarters. Capt. John E. Fondahl of the Eighth Precince has been nominated for reelection as president and is opposed by Lieut. Harry C. Blackman, head of the Special Investigations Squad.

LAUNCHES WONDERFUL DEEP-HUED SHADES

JULIUS GARFINCKEL & CO. REPORTING

In an evening scene of red, rose, pink, white, black, the dress in deep-hued blue stands out. It's the new and arresting color of the year. Hattie Carnegie fires it with her enthusiasm. She uses all the deep and purply blues: gentian blue, storm-tossed blue, purple iris, black tulip . . .

Her evening dresses are like flowers, with petals curving softly over the body, close as a bud — then bursting into bloom in wondrous skirts.

We sketch, left, a dinner dress in gentian-blue rayon satin. It has the paradox of deep décolletage and below-elbow sleeves. At the right, is Carnegie's stupendously beautiful evening gown in purply blue lamé brocade. Milliner's folds are cleverly manipulated on bodice and skirt.

Opening of Congress as Simple Unpretentious as Truman's Handshake With Marshall

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

BECAUSE it was so unaffectedly simple, the opening of Congress' special session was extraordinarily impressive. There was none of the pageantry which lifts similar European ceremonies; except for police and a squad of white-helmeted MPs, there wasn't a uniform in sight.

Ermine, red velvet, jewels and such giddy trappings were equally nonexistent. Our President wore business clothes, Mrs. Truman, a plain black wool suit. Her only ornament was a gold lapel pin. Even Secretary of State Marshall eschewed decorations for mufti—a blue suit and highly polished brown shoes.

Beforehand the House corridors were crowded but in the House chamber a report on Greco-Turkish aid droned on. At 10 past one every floor seat was filled. Senators pretzeled in a double crescent of leather chairs around the podium; Congressmen and a fringe of standees massed behind.

Scattered among the legislators were seven small girls, probably invited by earnest papas to see history made; and two of our Congresswomen, Ohio's Mrs. Frances Bolton, and Massachusetts' Mrs. Edith Rogers, whose cerise scarf and outsize corsage of gardenias were the gayest spots in the crowd of workday clothes.

In the Diplomatic Gallery

UPSTAIRS the galleries were filling. First arrivals were the State Department's protocal head, Stanley Woodward, and his assistants, Ray Muir and Ed Nash. As diplomats bulged out of elevators, they were shepherded into Representative Charles A. Eaton's (he's chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee) outer office to wait until the signal to march, strictly according to diplomatic protocol, to seats on the chamber floor.

Foreign envoys parade only at joint sessions. There were fewer than usual, some being at the U. N.; others, like Netherlands Ambassador van Kleffens, down with colds. Outstanding among the usual faces were France's Henri Bonnet, Italy's Alberto Tarchiani and Austria's legation secretary, Johannes Coreth, whose countries need 328, 227 and 42 million dollars, respectively, in interim aid if they are to survive the next 4½ months.

Outstanding, too, was a spate of new ambassadors from India, Burma, the Dominican Republic, and Portugal's gift to Washington hostesses, tall, handsome, unattached Ambassador Pedro Theotonio Pereira. This department spotted no representatives from the Soviet embassy, none from its satellite countries except Hungarian Charge d'Affaires Paul Marik.

Black Suits in Fashion

ONLY A handful of wives graced the diplomatic loge. Mrs. Bruggman, wife of the Swiss Minster and sister of Henry Wallace, looked smart in an upturned felt, trimmed with a chou of satin ribbon. Lady Inverchapel, a black checked, high buttoned suit under her fur coat, a tiny flower garlanded hat pushed off her blonde curls, sat in the front row beside Mrs. "Chip" Bohlen, State Department Counselor Bohlen and Assistant Secretary of State Norman Armour. Other diplomatic ladies were Canada's Mrs. Hume Wrong, in a trig black suit, Hungary's Mrs. Paul Marik, Liberia's Mrs. King, the Dominican Republic's Mrs. Tomeh.

Both the diplomatic and the adjoining loge reserved for White House guests were crowded. Mrs. Averell Harriman, a deep blue dress beneath her mink coat, was accompanied by her friend, Mrs. Ambrose Chambers of New York. Mrs. Stanley Woodward, a huge, pinkish flower pinned to lapel, swung her full skirt only a few inches above the ankles.

Among the foreign visitors were the Hon. and Mrs. S. S. Waterson from Australia, Lord and Lady Dorchester and Lady Radcliffe from England.

First Lady Listens

MRS. TRUMAN arrived with Clark Clifford. When the First Lady reached the house elevator, its operator wished to empty the car, make a special trip. Mrs. Truman refused firmly, was squashed tightly as you or I. In a front row seat, Mrs. Truman was flanked by Mrs. George Mesta, handsomely done up in purple, by Mrs. Ray Atherton and her husband, our Ambassador to Canada. Tall, handsome Mrs. Atherton was in deepest mourning, her mother having died last Saturday.

Throughout the President's speech, Mrs. Truman remained almost immobile. Her only gesture was putting on her glasses to watch her husband's entry.

Ready for the Entrance

EVERYTHING was in readiness, cameras were trained at the right angle, the radio boys had on their earphones, the more earnest press had pencils unfurled. At 1:25 p. m. the Speaker rapped for order. He ordered the "gentlemen from Texas, Indiana, Illinois" to escort the President. The Senators left the chamber.

A second rap. Foreign ambassadors were announced. A round of applause while the diplomats marched in single file led by the corps' dean, Carlos Martins of Brazil, followed by France's Bonnet, Britain's Inverchapel, Belgium's Silvercruys.

A third rap of gavel. The Cabinet was announced. More applause. Two by two they walked in, Marshall, Forrestal, Harriman, Anderson, Snyder, Schwellenbach.

A final rap. The President of the United States. The standing audience crescendoed its clapping. Followed by his senatorial escort, the smiling President walked briskly to the high desk.

His speech was enclosed in a brown leather loose leaf portfolio. It was typed with wide spaces between the lines, and as Mr. Truman read in an assured, calmly pleasant voice, he emphasized by making small gestures with his left hand. He was poised, confident. When the speech was done the President stepped down quickly and, on his way out, caught George Marshall's hand, shook it with warm finality. It was all simple as that.

Dinner Honors Luxembourg Foreign Minister

THE Foreign Minister of Luxembourg, Joseph Bech, was honored at a dinner party last evening at the Luxembourg Legation. The dinner was the second in a series of three which the Minister and Mme. Le Gallais are giving in his honor.

The Ambassador of Canada and Mrs. Wrong were ranking guests. Others included Associate Justice and Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, Gen. and Mrs. Omar N. Bradley, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Woodward, Mr. and Mrs. Andre Visson, Lady Wilson, Edwin Watson and Edward Nash.

Sunday evening the visiting Minister of Foreign Affairs was honor guest at a stag dinner given by former Ambassador Joseph E. Davies at his home on Klingle rd. The Foreign Minister and the former Ambassador date their friendship back to the time when the latter served as United States Ambassador to Belgium and Minister to Luxembourg. This was in 1939, at the time Dr. Bech was Prime Minister of Luxembourg.

Guests at Sunday's stag dinner included the Chief Justice, Fred M. Vinson, the Ambassador of Brazil, Carlos Martins; the Ambassador of France, Henri Bonnet; the Ambassador of Belgium, Baron Silvercruys; the Ambassador of Italy, Alberto Tarchiani; the Minister of Luxembourg, Hughes Le Gallais; the Postmaster General, Robert E. Hannegan; the Secretary of Agriculture, Cliton P. Anderson; Senator Millard E. Tydings and other notables.

Germany Still Offers Threat, Pajus Declares

By Genevieve Reynolds

"Germany's war potential has not been destroyed," declared Jean Pajus, former adviser, U. S. Foreign Economic Administration, as well as former adviser to the U. S. Treasury mission to Germany.

Speaking at a luncheon meeting of the Woman's National Democratic Club yesterday in the clubhouse, he told the audience "Germany still has the steel-producing capacity of Britain and France combined, and the country that controls steel and coal controls the destiny of Europe."

Germany can produce 23 million tons of steel per year, he said, but at the present time is producing only three million. The Germans, he charged, are to renew full speed when the occupation ends.

"Distribution of German steel to other countries is vital in order to restore the economy of western Europe," the speaker stated.

Pajus maintained that the British have not de-Nazified German industry and insisted that the same people who controlled international steel cartels of that country are still in power.

"If German economy and industry are to be restored, they must be put under international control, especially the Ruhr," he said.

The speaker declared that France, Italy, the Netherlands and Belgium badly need coal and coke exports from Germany to up their production of vitally needed materials.

Mary Haworth's Mail

On Behalf of Fun-Loving Niece, 16, Aunt Asks Which Is Best: Making Many Friends In School or Learning How to Earn Money

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am writing on behalf of my niece, Ellen, 16, a junior in high school. She belongs to a girls' club, is a member of the student council, active in all school activities and very popular with boys and girls. She is fun loving and maybe a little happy-go-lucky.

I myself am only 23 and when I was in high school I was deprived of all good times because I had to work after school and on Saturdays. That is mainly why I am writing. Ellen's mother (my sister) wants her to get a part-time job, too. She says Ellen needs to acquire job experience before she graduates.

They don't need the money, so I see no reason why Ellen should work now. Experience is handy to have, I know; but the teens are supposed to be the best years of one's life, and I've lived to learn that everything comes in time: responsibility, capability, work, etc. So why rush things?

Aunt Was Denied Gay School Life

AFTER graduation you want to look back and reminisce in terms of friends, good times, school events, even cramming for exams,—not think in terms of experience gained. Believe me, my children are going to get full chance at the friends, popularity and fun I missed. And I know you can't have these things and work while going to school.

If you haven't the leisure to go places and do things with your schoolmates, you don't have enough in common with them to be really friends. I haven't expressed myself very well, but I hope you get the general idea.

In your opinion, which is more important during high school years: Football games, class and club meetings, even just gabfests with the kids after school? Or getting a job, earning a few dollars and learning responsibility, at the expense of missing those other things? A. R.

Teen Years Aren't The Best of Life

DEAR A. R.: In my opinion, it is nonsensical to think the teens are but definitely the best years of life. The years up to 20 are decisive years, yes, in the sense that the cast of character and mold of destiny are being formed. But the years from 30 to 60 are potentially the great years of life, to which youth is the prelude and age the summation.

As to which is more important in high school days, a merry-go-round of activity with the gang or putting one's nose to the grindstone of wage-earning to get job experience—I tend to back away from that narrow choice. I wouldn't vote decisively for either proposition, as a generality.

However, speaking of Ellen, the chances are that in making her presence felt and her influence popular in various extra-curricular campus activities, she is learning to use her head and acquiring savvy in working with others—invaluable laboratory training in leadership—that should be more profitable to her in later years than present catch-as-catch-can job experience would be: say as soda-jerker or errand girl.

Youth Needs Time To Find Vocation

THUS if Ellen's family isn't in want of financial help, my advice to the mother is to forego the idea of assigning Ellen to dollar-grubbing while in school, and encourage her rather to find congenial employment during summer holidays or take up special studies—or art, stenography, voice, modeling or what-not—in line with her vocational preference.

Now, about your resolve to give your children full chance at the friends, popularity and fun you missed in student years—watch that tendency. It might easily overcarry into a spoiling process that left them good-for-nothing, thanklessly selfish and permanently infantile.

Moreover, one of the worst mistakes parents ever make is to try to relive their lives through their children's, which inevitably leads to mutual frustration as the children struggle to call their soul their own: as God intended.

M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Tomorrow: Man and wife are at loggerheads over their conflicting tastes in radio fare. She likes serials, slapstick; he favors news, good music.

Easier on the Chairs

When the children have outgrown their high chairs and yet are so small that their feet do not touch the floor, foot stools should be provided for them. They will make the children sit properly and prevent damage to the rungs of the chairs. A wooden soap box, covered with some inexpensive material, will answer the purpose for this short time.

How do people paint their ceilings without the paint splashing over themselves? Is there some kind of guard to put onto the brush. E. W.

The best way to prevent getting splashed when painting a ceiling is using the technique a professional painter uses. Dip the brush only to half the length of the bristles, wipe against the edge of the can, slap the bristles lightly against the side of the can to throw off surplus paint, and start to paint with what remains. Paint should be applied with the bristle tips. With excess paint removed from the brush, splashing is reduced to almost nothing. As an added protection, a child's hollow rubber ball can be cut in half and the handle of the brush pushed through a slit cut in the middle of one half. This forms a cup to catch any paint that might run down.

THANKSGIVING pie really carries out the spirit of the occasion when it's topped with a turkey silhouette like this one! Cut yourself a paper pattern, lay it on top of rolled-out pastry, cut around it with a knife, and lift out the turkey. You needn't worry because this pie is almost a two-cruster; the Citizens Food Committee has called off conservation rules for Thanksgiving Day.

I have a wine suede pouch bag that is lightly soiled on the creases. Is there any method by which I can remove the soil without staining the suede? G. C. S.

Several local shoe stores sell a clear liquid suede cleaner that's recommended for use on colored suede.

Can you give me a recipe for real old-fashioned rum cake? The kind I refer to is rich and moist like a pound cake, and sometimes has pecans on the bottom. Is rum poured over it or is the rum put into the cake? J. J. A.

Here's a French recipe for rum cake (Baba au Rhum) that's quite delicious:

½ cup warm water
2¼ cups flour
½ cup shortening
3 tablespoons sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
3 eggs

For sauce:
½ cup sugar
2 to 3 tablespoons rum

For glaze:
1 cup apricot puree
¼ cup granulated sugar

Dissolve yeast in warm water and add ¼ cup of flour. Let rise in warm place until light. Meantime, cream the shortening, add lemon rind, sugar, and salt. Beat in eggs one by one, then combine with least sponge and remaining flour. Beat for at least 15 minutes, then pour in deep mold with hole in center. Allow dough to double in size before baking in moderate oven. Bake for about 40 minutes. Boil the ingredients for the sauce together 10 minutes. When cake is done, prick holes in undersurface and place in pan of sauce so that it will seep up through it. Heat apricot puree and granulated sugar together thoroughly until sugar melts. Use to glaze top of cake. Stud with nuts and crystallyzed fruit before serving, if desired.

What is the best method for removing blood stains from a white cotton shirt? C. C. B.

A sure method is to cover the stain with a thick liquid paste made of ordinary white starch and water. Allow to dry, then brush off. An old stain should first be soaked with water.

What sort of preparations will give a heat-proof finish to furniture? I have some shellacked furniture which is easily spotted by heat and water. T. W. T.

Both spar varnish and varnishes made from synthetic resins (which will be stated on the label) make a finish that is not easily spotted with heat or water. These varnishes are quick drying and therefore somewhat harder to handle than shellac, which is one reason shellac is often recommended for home refinishing of furniture. They do give a tougher service, though, that's easier to keep in good condition.

I wish to "Peter Hunt" a desk which was refinished at home some time ago with a dark mahogany stain and a high varnish finish. Should this finish merely be sanded down or will it be necessary to use a professional remover before applying a new coat of enamel? M. S. M.

If the old finish is in good condition, it will not be necessary to refinish it before applying a new coat of paint. Make sure the surface is clean and dry. Remove oil, grease and furniture polish by wiping with a cloth saturated with turpentine. Where wax has been used, repeat this treatment several times to insure complete removal of the wax. Follow immediately with a clean cloth wiping until the surface is dry. It's a good idea, too, to sand the old finish lightly with No. 2/0 or 3/0 sandpaper to dull the gloss and provide adhesion, then dust off. Apply one or more coats of enamel. If you're changing from a dark to a light color, two will probably to necessary.

If the old finish is badly scaled, cracked or crazed, it will be necessary to remove it before painting the desk. However, if there are only a few rough spots on its surface, you'll probably be able to sandpaper them smooth so that they won't show after the piece is repainted.

Market Memo
By Lucia Brown

BRIGHTENING the local food scene are several new products that recently hit the Washington market. One of them's "Wheet," which was introduced here this week by its colorful producer, George Haig . . . native Armenian who once served with Lawrence in Arabia. Mr. Haig has a process which utilized 98.77 per cent of the wheat grain . . . including the germ . . . quite an unusual procedure. "Wheet" is "gelatinized," then dried . . . making a delicious, unusually nutritious breakfast food, meat extender and generally useful food product.

Another appetizing new product is Arnold's "Raisin Tea Loaf." It's chockful of raisins . . . one third raisins, in fact . . . and baked in a brick oven, as are all Arnold breads. Rich and spicy, it's delicious for toast, sandwiches, or "as is."

Then there are packaged frozen eclairs . . . made by a method developed after much trial and error by Fanny Herrick of New York . . . maker of Fantail frozen canapes. These eclairs are like regular chocolate frosted ones with one interesting exception . . . they're filled with rich, refreshing ice cream. They can be stored in the freezing compartment of your refrigerator . . . ready for serving at a moment's notice.

The Wheet, raisin tea loaf and frozen eclairs are on sale at a number of local independent grocery stores.

University Women Add Two Members To National Staff

The American Association of University Women has two new staff members. They are Miss Christine Heinig, a specialist in child development who pioneered in establishing preschool training centers in this country and Australia, and Miss Marjorie L. Temple of Baltimore, a former attorney and economist in the United States Department of Labor.

Succeeding Mrs. Harriet Houdlette, Miss Heinig will serve as AAUW childhood education associate and Miss Temple will double in two fields—status of women and legislative program.

Miss Heinig helped to organize and directed for three years the National Child Research Center here which was set up in 1931 under a five-year grant from the Laura Spellman Rockefeller Fund.

In her home State, Miss Temple took special interest in the legal aspects of physical therapy, working with the medical faculty of the State and the State Board of Physical Therapists. Recently she was appointed only woman member of the Maryland Board of Physical Therapy Examiners by the State Governor.

An Expert Shares Her Secrets

Now's the Time to Bake Your Holiday Fruit Cake

By Essie L. Elliott

"IT'S TIME to make holiday fruitcakes. What recipe shall I use? The cake I made last year crumbled so when I cut it. Tasted good, but who likes to eat fruitcake with a spoon?"

Isn't that a familiar conversation among friends who can't let a year go by without this traditional delicacy of winter holiday time? Let us try to take some of the kinks out of this culinary procedure.

Three recipes, decidedly different from one another, are offered here for your individual approval. Let's use them as illustrations as we discuss fruitcakes from raisin to tea table.

The fruit itself: Allow plenty of time to prepare the dried fruits and nuts—always a day before the mixing.

Some recipes say chop, some say grind. I prefer to slice the citron with a sharp knife into slivers or chunks. Citron warmed slightly in the oven slices easily. Sometimes long, half-inch thick "logs" of citron are pushed down into the batter after it is in the pan.

Raisins, prunes, pears, apricots, dates—all dehydrated fruits are tender enough to snip into desired sized pieces with kitchen shears. If the bulk fruit has become too dry, steam the fruit for a few minutes.

Fruit cake—symbol of holiday hospitality!

Weigh or measure the amounts called for in the recipe you select and set them aside, protected from dust until ready for use.

Why no shortening? Because it is not necessary really and most fats, especially butter, tend to change flavor with age.

Why no eggs? The same reason. (The pound cake ancestry is fast disappearing in this recipe as you will note.)

Why no leavening? Because the teaspoon of soda or the two teaspoons of baking powder in a 6-pound batter can not exert much influence. Besides, the more porous the batter which separates the fruit, the more likely it is to tear away in slicing.

Why two sugars and a sirup? A famous baker told me to! The sirup, honey or molasses helps to keep the cake from drying out.

Why two kinds of flour? A baker told me that he always used bread flour and cake flour in the proportion I have given. So I tried it and had excellent results.

Why the baking powder? Well, this is more nearly a conventional recipe and the cake is less compact than the Unusual Fruitcake. I am sure that some of you are bound by tradition to like this type of cake.

The Light Golden Fruitcake is a great favorite. It is more like grandmother's pound cake with fruit in it. It is very easy to make. It does not have the long keeping qualities of the heavier dark fruitcakes, so give it a short life—and it will be a merry one. The golden seedless raisin are especially suited to the so-called white fruitcake.

Preparing the pans for baking: Cut a pattern of heavy paper to fit bottom and sides of the pans and grease this paper. Glass baking dishes need greasing only.

STEAMING first and then baking is a preferred method by some good cake bakers I know. Cover the container with heavy waxed paper or aluminum foil. Tie it on securely. Set it on a rack in a kettle deep enough to hold the container. Put 1 inch of water in kettle and cover tightly. Steam one hour. Replenish boiling water if it boils away. Take cake from kettle. Remove covering and bake at 300 degrees F. for one hour. Test for doneness. Cool for about 10 minutes. Remove from pan. Take off the greased paper and cool thoroughly.

After cakes are cold, store in a tight container (tin boxes are excellent). Often the cake seems a bit hard and dry when it comes from the oven. The storage will mellow it and if an orange is placed in the box it will give off enough moisture to hasten this ripening.

How to cut fruitcakes: Certainly not with a dull knife. Cut with a sawing motion. A ripened cake kept in the refrigerator (wrapped in foil or heavy waxed paper) will cut more easily than one at room temperature.

Here are my favorite recipes:

GOLDEN STATE FRUITCAKE

2 cups seedless raisins
1 cup seeded raisins
½ cup dried apricots, slivered
1 cup pitted uncooked prunes, slivered
½ cup dried pears, slivered
1 cup candied cherries, halved
1 cup slivered citron
1 cup dates, cut in small pieces
2 cups chopped walnuts
2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
½ cup sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1 teaspoon mace or nutmeg
1 teaspoon cloves
1 cup peanut oil
½ cup white sugar
½ cup brown sugar
½ cup corn sirup, honey or molasses
4 eggs, beaten
½ cup orange juice
½ cup orange marmalade
½ cup jelly, melted
Brandy

Prepare fruits and nuts day before making cake. Sift together all-purpose flour, cake flour, baking powder, salt and spices. Combine oil, sugar, brown sugar, corn sirup and eggs. Add flour mixture alternately with orange juice. Add friuts, nuts and marmalade. Line bottom and sides of two 9½x5x2½-inch pans with greased brown paper. Fill with batter. Bake in slow oven (300 degrees F.) 2½ hours or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Brush top with jelly and decorate as desired with candied fruits and blanched almonds. Return to over 15 minutes longer. Cool thoroughly. Wrap in cheesecloth moistened with brandy. Store in airtight metal container. Moisten cheesecloth with brandy daily for a week. Store in airtight container until ready to use. Approximate yield: Two (3-pound) fruit cakes.

LIGHT GOLDEN FRUITCAKE

4 cups sifted all-purpose flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup shortening
2 cups sugar
⅔ cup orange juice
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
6 egg whites
1 cup golden seedless raisins
¼ cup slivered dried apricots
½ cup candied cherries
½ cup slivered candied pineapple
½ cup slivered citron
¼ cup slivered blanched almonds
¼ cup shredded coconut
½ cup jelly, melted
Brandy

Sift together flour and baking powder. Cream shortening until soft. Gradually add sugar and beat until light and fluffy. Add orange rind. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Fold into batter. Add remaining ingredients except jelly. Mix well. Line sides and bottom of 9-inch spring form cake pan with greased brown paper. Fill with batter. Bake in slow oven (300° F.) 2¾ to 3 hours, or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Spread with jelly and decorate as desired with candied fruits and blanched almonds. Return to slow oven 20 minutes. Cool thoroughly in pans. Remove and wrap in cheesecloth moistened with brandy. Store in airtight container until ready to use. This cake will keep about one week to 10 days if properly stored. Approximate yield: One (4-pound) fruit cake.

For Smaller Cakes

Using recipe above, pour batter into four greased brown paper lined loaf pans (2¼x5x2 inches). Bake in a slow oven (300° F.) two hours. Follow directions for glazing and storing as given above. Yield: Four (1-pound) loaves.

UNUSUAL FRUITCAKE

1 pound mixed candied fruits (candied orange, lemon and grapefruit peel, citron and cherries)
¼ cup orange juice
3 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon mace
1 teaspoon cloves
2 cups chopped nuts
3 cups seedless raisins
1 cup brown sugar
1 cup white sugar
2 cups water
½ cup jelly, melted
Brandy

Prepare candied fruits by clipping into slivers or dice with scissors or knife. Soak in orange juice 10 minutes. Sift together flour, salt and spices. Combine with candied fruits and nuts. Mix together raisins, brown sugar, white sugar and water in saucepan. Boil 5 minutes. Cool. Add to flour mixture and mix well. Line sides and bottom of 8½-inch tube pan with greased brown paper. Fill with batter and bake in slow oven (300° F.) 3 hours, or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Brush top with jelly and decorate as desired with candied fruits and blanched almonds. Return to oven 20 minutes longer. Cool thoroughly. Wrap in cheesecloth moistened with brandy. Store in airtight metal container. For seven days moisten cheesecloth with brandy. Store in airtight container until ready to use. Approximate yield: one (3-pound) fruit cake.

Don't Be Shy In Heeding Infant's Cry

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Every new mother feels a terrible sense of helplessness when the baby cries. The wails are so piteous and the baby is so weak and small. But, she is self-conscious about picking him up for someone is always ready to tell her, "Don't start that or the first thing you know the baby will be crying to be picked up."

Then the first article she reads says something quite different. It says, "Don't let the baby cry. It fills the baby with a sense of insecurity when his wants go unfulfilled. Give him attention when he needs it."

So, there she is on the horn of a dilemma. Shall she or shall she That is the question.

The answer is that she shall. Let's be realistic about this. Babies do cry for short periods and when they stop crying look as bland as milk and without a sign of discontent. But, when they cry hard and keep on crying, they need attention. Maybe you don't know why they are crying but, if they are crying, then do something about it.

If it is near the baby's feeding time, then feed him. If he has just been fed, lift him up, pat his back, maybe he still has a burp that needs to come up.

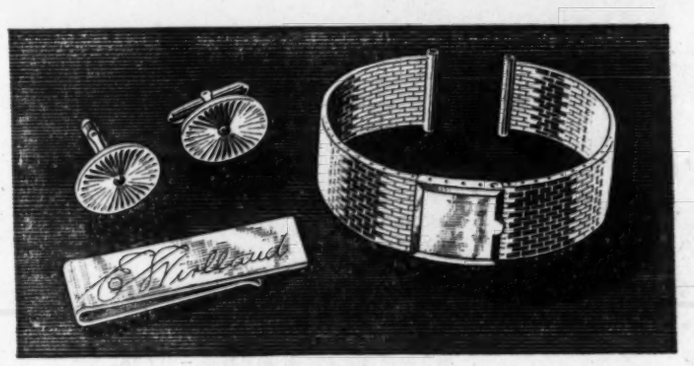

If the crying continues, change his position, put him in another room, adjust a bright pillow beside him, or if it is night then turn on a light.

Turn on the radio softly, that may soothe him. If the crying keeps on and seems purposeful, then give more milk, maybe the feeding wasn't as generous and satisfying as the mother imagined it to be.

Letting him cry to discipline the baby is out. It was always a cruel and careless way to treat a helpless baby. If mother finds she has to fuss daily to keep the baby contented she will put her wits to work to find out what is wrong. She will realize that well-fed babies are contented and cry little, and if her baby isn't that way, its feeding, or its care is someway to blame. Never the baby. He isn't cross on purpose.

When a baby is allowed to cry and cry when he needs attention all he learns is that he has to cry and so he continues to do so. That, then, is a bad habit, and like all bad habits hard to break.

Sermon to Sockeroo

The Revolution In the Theater

By Richard L. Coe

TAKING THE LONG VIEW is a luxury for which the daily reporter sometimes envies the scholarly set. Theatrical reportage in the daily press and the ubiquitous slang of Variety inevitably veer to superlatives at one extreme or the other.

Now a professor of English has come out with a book about our American theater. Edmond McAdoo Gagey calls his book, "Revolution in American Drama."

And "Revolution" is the word for those years he covers—1912 to last season. The shifts that are almost imperceptible from year to year have indeed amounted to a revolution in our theater since 1912. And the revolution in the theater has come, as all things in the theater do, from changes in society itself.

Dr. Gagey's first picture of the theater points out: "The box office standards of Broadway rested upon the system of popular morality inherited from the nineteenth century. According to an unwritten but widely prevalent code, unpleasant subjects were barred from the theater. Plays need not preach a sermon, but they should not run counter to conventional manners and morals. The criteria were the same in effect that govern the self-censorship of the moving-picture industry or the acceptance and rejection of manuscripts by popular magazines."

Think of the revolution in both public and theater which has recently made possible such plays as "Deep Are the Roots," "The Fatal Weakness," "The Glass Menagerie," "Waiting for Lefty," "The Women" and "The Time of Your Life." They couldn't have happened in 1912.

Low Comedy to High

Just as the theater itself has shown most vitality in its development of comedy during that period, Dr. Gagey is at his best in chapters devoted to this most American aspect of theater. He traces how "the greatest change in the 20's and 30's was in the gaudy blossoming of low comedy, which turned first to realism, then to satire and depiction of mores, discovering thereby the potentialities of a genuine comic spirit.

"Considering the period as a whole, one is struck not only by the infinite variety of comic forms, but also by the efforts, largely successful, to develop a true native comedy with distinctly American characters and themes."

The road from "Three Wise Fools" (which Metro's production with Margaret O'Brien in the Helen Menken role last year emphasized as completely outmoded) to "Born Yesterday" is a fascinating reflection of the change 30 years has brought, both to the theater and to American morality.

Dr. Gagey, who teaches in the English department of Bradford Junior College, Mass., and at Columbia University's summer sessions, becomes the journalist, inevitably, before finishing his book on a subject which never will be completed:

"It is important to remember that contemporary American drama was formed by three great revolutionary drives—the revolution in manners and morals that inhibitions of the nineteenth century, the artistic revolution that invested a pedestrian theater with color, poetry and beauty, and the leftist revolution of the 30's that brought missionary fervor and social consciousness in a crusade against war, poverty and injustice . . . What form and direction will the drama of the future take? . . . The interested but cautious spectator will have to emulate the patron of the soap operas and tune in a decade from now for an answer."

"REVOLUTION IN AMERICAN Drama." by Edmond McAdoo Gagey. (Columbia University Press, $3.75)

FOUR NEW PICTURES arrive this week.

"The Lost Moment" comes to the Capitol Thursday. Adapted from Henry James' novel, "The Aspern Papers," this unusual story tells of a publisher's efforts to obtain the love letters of a Nineteenth Century American poet. Agnes Moorhead plays the 105-year-old sweetheart who hangs on to the letters at the cost of her life. Robert Cummings and Susan Hayward are the stars.

"Escape Me Never," which served Elisabeth Bergner on stage and screen, comes to the Warner Thursday with Ida Lupino and Errol Flynn in the leads. It's a highly romantic story set in Venice, London and the Austrian Tyrol.

"Last of the Redmen" is really James Fenimore Cooper's "The Last of the Mohicans." Jon Hall, Michael O'Shea, Buster Crabbe and Evelyn Ankers are the leading players. This color film opens Thursday at the Metropolitan.

"Green for Danger" arrives Saturday at the Hippodrome. This mystery yarn by the producers of "The Lady Vanishes," "Night Train" and "The Adventuress," is a Scotland Yard story with an English cast including Alastair Sim, Rosamund John, Trevor Howard, Leo Genn, Sally Gray and Judy Campbell.

ANOTHER EVENT of the week is the Children's Museum's presentation of "Mr. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" Saturday morning and afternoon at Lisner Auditorium by the Clare Tree Major company. Performances at 10:30 a. m. and 2 p. m. are priced at $1.80, $1.20 and 60c. For further information call DEcatur 4339 or write the Trailercoach Museum, Western ave. at Military rd. nw.

TONIGHT'S the night for the Lemonade Opera Company of New York's "Don Giovanni" at Cafritz Auditorium, 16th and Q sts. The Mozart classic is sung in English. Curtain at 8:30.

Rookie Trooper Recaptures Six In Prison Break

Elkins, W. Va., Nov. 17 (AP).—A young rookie State trooper recaptured at gunpoint today six young State convicts, a little more than 12 hours after 14 men staged a wholesale break from the Huttonsville medium security prison.

State Police Capt. James Fillinger reported that Trooper Robert Bonar rounded up six of the inmates who with eight others forced the bars of a first-floor window of the prison dormitory and fled last night.

Bonar, 25, a former Marshall County deputy sheriff and a member of a new class of rookie troopers who finished training only last July 1, came upon the six in the woods of the Becky's Creek section, near Cheat Bridge, Fillinger said.

There were seven in the group, but one managed to elude the young trooper.

Confederate Women's Home Fund Curb Urged by Va. Board

Richmond, Va., Nov. 17 (AP).—A legislative commission recommended today that future State financial aid to the Home for Needy Confederate Women be "strictly limited" to cover only those residents of the institution who are genuinely in need and who are of closest kin to Confederate veterans.

The commission, which was created by the 1946 General Assembly to study the home, made its report to Governor Tuck and the 1948 General Assembly.

It expressed doubts that the home gave any priority to applicants actually in need and said that, on the contrary, persons who could contribute to the institution's endowment "were favored over all others" in admission of new residents.

The commission described this as "an unhealthy situation" and unanimously recommended against the admission of persons on the basis of their being able to endow the home."

To assure that State funds, of which about $50,000 a year go to the home, be used only for needy "original" kin of veterans, the commission made these proposals:

The home must keep the State auditor of public accounts informed of applications and admissions; admissions should, as far as practicable, be on a "first come, first served" basis; at regular intervals, appropriate welfare authorities should be required to investigate the financial status of the home's residents.

Also, the commission drew a line of distinction between residents of the "original class"—needy wives, widows, sisters and daughters of Confederate soldiers—and "female descendants." The former group was named in original legislation regarding the home in 1898 and the latter was added by amendments in the 1920s.

The commission said that when the original class is no longer represented at the home, State appropriations should stop.

As fro the home itself, the commission found it "has been operated in a clean and economical manner; the atmosphere is quite home-like and the residents appear well satisfied." The commission commended Mrs. A. J. Montague, president and director of the home, for its efficient operations.

Waitress Rouses Hotel Guests at Outbreak of Fire

Radford, Va., Nov. 17 (AP).—A quick-thinking waitress roused all guests in the Dixie Inn Hotel at the outbreak of a morning fire that destroyed the three-story, 37-room brick building today. Damage was estimated at $150,000.

Mrs. Vera Saul rang the rooms of the 24 guests and all but two managed to get out before the rapidly spreading flames blocked normal exits. The two remaining—a woman not immediately identified, and Sherman Reese, a permanent resident—were trapped in their third-floor rooms, but were brought down fire ladders to safety.

The blaze, which apparently started in a storage room of a five and dime store—a part of the hotel building—wrecked the store as well as a grill which was also housed in the hotel structure.

When George Washington proposed to acquire the site of Lafayette Square in 1791 as a public park it was a farm that had been in the possession of the Pierce family since 1685.

Bar Association Asks That Leviness Be Disbarred

Baltimore, Nov. 17 (AP).—The Bar Association of Baltimore City today asked for the disbarment of Charles T. Leviness 3d, former State official convicted recently of Federal income tax evasion.

The organization sought leave to intervene in the matter through its president, Paul R. Kach, and its attorneys, John H. Skeen and Samuel J. Fisher.

Leviness was fined a total of $10,000 after his conviction in Federal Court here October 15, and was cited shortly afterward by the Supreme bench of Baltimore to show cause why he should not be disbarred.

Waiving a hearing, Leviness asked that he be suspended rather than disbarred.

The judges of the Supreme bench are expected to reach a decision at a meeting this week.

Teachers Hit Lane's Stand On Federal Aid

Baltimore, Nov. 17 (AP).—A local teacher's union took issue today with Governor Lane's report to a congressional committee that Maryland "can do more for public education without additional Federal assistance."

Miss Una Corbett, head of Local 340, American Federation of Teachers, asked Lane in a letter "by what standard of measurement" he arrived at his decision.

The Governor had written Representative Hartley (R., N. J.) in answer to a query that Maryland has "plenty of reserve financial strength."

Miss Corbett declared that "no citizen will disagree with your statement that you oppose 'Federal interference where it deprives the people of the right to rule.'

"However, we should quarrel with the use of language that identifies Federal aid with 'interference.'

"The truth is that the States of our Union have been receiving Federal aid since the passage of the Smith-Hughes Act in 1917. In the 30 years since then, there has been no evidence of any attempt (by the Federal Government) either to interfere in school matters or to take over control.

"And Maryland has had her share of the funds.

"Yet in educational matters our fair State remains inviolate."

She said "all serious advocates of Federal aid propose to continue disbursement of Federal funds through the respective State Departments of Education, assuring local control."

She asserted Maryland in 1946 ranked 12th among the States in wealth yet its public schools were "47th in all-around performance."

"Do you seriously regard a salary scale of $2200 to $3800 adequate for college-trained personnel?" she asked.

Use of Dry Ice Proposed to Cool Coal Bin Fires

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 17 (AP).—Dry ice as a tamer of coal bin fires was suggested today by Dr. John J. Rutledge, chief mine engineer of the Bureau of Mines.

Rutledge said he had the idea from Washington State mining experts who had found dry ice effective.

A recent schoolhouse bin fire was cooled off by using a total of 750 pounds of dry ice, doing away with the necessity of shoveling the coal out of the bin.

Rutledge said there had been "quite a few bin fires" in public schools around Baltimore, some of which were "very difficult to handle."

Some of the smouldering coal had been strip mined, he said, adding, "in all but one instance the coal which ignited had been dumped into a bin which already contained one or two tons from the previous heating season. It is a bad practice to dump new coal on old in a deep bin or silo."

Arlington County to Follow Grand Jury Recommendations

Plans to carry out most of the recommendations handed down by an Arlington County grand jury three weeks ago already have been set in motion, County Manager A. T. Lundenberg disclosed yesterday.

In a report prepared for the County Board, Lundberg said some of the practices suggested by the jury had been followed prior to the report, while county officials have been working for "some time" to institute procedures recommended in other phases of the jury's findings.

The county manager suggested, however, that the county consolidate all inspection divisions into a single unit before moving to establish a director of public safety in charge of police and related activities—a post strongly recommended by the grand jury.

Concedes Idea Advisable

Lundberg conceded that a director of public safety would be "advisable . . . at some time," but suggested that consolidation of the inspection divisions be the "first move in this direction." The inspection units—including building, electrical and plumbing installations—all come under the department of public safety, he pointed out.

He suggested that the three divisions be merged into a single inspection section, with one person in charge.

An "objective study" to determine the size and type of police force needed and to set up an adequate salary scale will be carried out as recommended by the grand jury, Lundberg said. He said present information regarding police departments, advocating one officer for every 1000 persons, has become obsolete with present-day police facilities.

The grand jury's recommendation for a job placement system, which would be used to determine the job for which each man on the police force is best fitted, will be followed through the objective study of the force, Lunberg's report said.

To Issue Police Manual

Organization of the police force so that each man will "know definitely his own responsibilities," also suggested by the jury, will be accomplished through a police manual soon to be released, Lundberg declared. He said Chief Harry L. Woodyard has been working on the manual for some time and it is nearly ready for publication.

Regular training and refresher course for policemen, also recommended in the jury report, have been conducted annually by the force as a matter of policy, Lundberg said.

Lundberg pointed out that a special committee of the County Board is already investing ways and means of setting up a police trial or review board to study cases of police discipline. The grand jury had recommended that no policeman be demoted without a hearing before a "properly constituted body."

The jury also recommended that county officials take further steps to break up gambling in the county by a full study of evidence taken in the establishment of Russell "Peanuts" Schegle, convicted gambler, and by declaring forfeit the $1000 bond posted by another gambling suspect, who jumped bond in 1946. Both recommendations, Lundberg said, are being studied by the Commonwealth's attorney's office and Police Chief Woodyard.

Lundberg's report will be submitted to the County Board at its regular meeting Saturday.

Va. Upholds Segregation Law In Fairfax Bus Case Appeal

Richmond, Va., Nov. 17 (AP).—Attorney General Harvey B. Apperson today argued before the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals that a Negro passenger who refuses to sit in the rear of an interstate bus in Virginia may be fined for disorderly conduct if his refusal "annoys" other passengers, or the bus driver.

In his first appearance before the court since he became attorney general last month, Apperson defended the Commonwealth's side in the racial segregation law case.

The case before the court was brought by Lottie Taylor, who appealed a $5 fine imposed on her in the Circuit Court of Fairfax County for disorderly conduct.

The woman boarded a Virginia Stage Lines bus in Washington to go to Madison County. She refused to move to the rear of the bus from her original seat five places from the front. The bus was delayed for an hour because of the incident, and the driver swore out a warrant against her.

Her attorney, James R. Raby of Alexandria, recalled that the United States Supreme Court had ruled that Virginia's "Jim Crow" statute is unconstitutional as far as it applies to interstate buses.

Grangers to Hear Lane

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 17 (AP).—Governor Lane will address the seventy-third annual three-day convention of the Maryland State Grange here December 2, Edward F. Holter of Middletown, master of the Grange, announced today. Approximately 300 State Grangers are expected to attend.

Bethlehem Workers Back

Elderly Couple Beaten on Estate

Prince Frederick, Md., Nov. 17 (AP).—An elderly couple, caretakers of the nearby Coster estate belonging to Mrs. William Applegate of Baltimore, were in the Prince Frederick Hospital today with injuries inflicted by an unknown assailant, Magistrate William Duke reported.

He said Garrison Edwards, 70, and his wife, 65, were found unconscious yesterday in the Coster house, by a neighbor.

Hospital officials said Mrs. Edwards is still unconscious with a critical skull injury, and that Edwards, who also suffered head injuries, is too ill to explain the incident.

State Trooper Walter H. Wahl and Sheriff Roy C. Howard reported they as yet had no clue to the mysterious attack.

Tidelands Decision 'Body Blow', Says Tuck

New Orleans, La., Nov. 17 (AP).—Virginia's Governor William M. Tuck said today in an interview that the Tidelands decision of the United States Supreme Court "struck a body blow at the fundamental principles of our democratic system of government."

The 235-pound Virginian, here on what he described as a "rest trip," added:

"Contrary to what many may think, it is to the interest of all the states to see the decision voided, especially those states having tidelands."

The ruling gives the Federal Government clear title to mineral rights of all submerged coastal lands.

Murder Jury Told of Hair On Hammer

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 17 (AP).—An FBI agent testified today that hair found on a hammer near a well in which Joseph Henry Holland, 43, said his wife plunged to her death matched Mrs. Holland's hair "in all observable characteristics."

Special Agent Robert E. Duckett of the Federal Bureau of Investigation testified as an expert witness in the Anne Arundel County Court trial of Holland, an Odenton carpenter, who is charged with murdring his wife Estelle M. Holland, 41.

Cannot Be Positive

Duckett qualified his statement, however, saying, "I would like to point out that positive identification cannot be made based entirely on hair comparison due to the limited number of characteristics in human hair."

He said if samples were dissimilar any relation was ruled out, but if they were similar, "you can say they could have come from the same head."

Earlier State Trooper Noah J. Anderson said the hammer with hair embedded in it was found in the crotch of a pear tree 4 feet from the well.

In his opening address to the jury, State's Attorney Marvin I. Anderson said he would prove Mrs. Holland was murdered with a hammer wielded by Holland, whose alleged intimacies with a Mrs. Audrey Hill of Severn, Md., were detailed.

Report Due In January on MarkeyContest

By The Associated Press

A Senate subcommittee reviewing Maryland's contested 1946 senatorial election will finish its work and have a final report ready for action by the Senate next January, Senator Jenner (R., Ind.) said yesterday.

Jenner, chairman of the Senate Rules Subcommittee on Elections, told reporters after a subcommittee meeting yesterday that his group today would begin a final review of 20,000 to 25,000 ballots still in dispute.

D. John Markey, a Republican, is contesting the election of Senator O'Conor, a Democrat, who won by an official State margin of 2232 votes out of a total of 472,000. Markey charged errors and irregularities.

To Check Each Ballot

Jenner said he and other members of the subcommittee—Senators Bricker (R., Ohio) and Myers (D., Pa.)—would "go over each ballot" in the final review and estimated this would take a "solid week" of work.

The recheck actually will take longer than a week, he said, because members will not tbe able to devote all their time to this task.

Once the disputed ballots are ruled on, he said, the committee will check into charges of election "irregularities" and make its report to the ful Rules Committee, which, in turn, sends its recommendations to the Senate.

Consideration Now Unlikely

Jenner said it was "not likely" that the contest would be considered by the Seenate during the special session.

The 20,000 to 25,000 ballots still in dispute are the residue of a total of 190,000 votes cast in 17 counties in which a recount was conducted. Attorneys for O'Conor and Markey were able to agree on all but these.

This is in addition to 6500 disputed ballots from five other counties which Jenner's subcommittee previously has ruled on.

Defendant in Slaying To Be Given Sanity Test

Woodstock, Va., Nov. 17 (AP).—Mrs. Julia Emily Emmart, charged with the pistol slaying of her husband, George, in his Strasburg, Va., drugstore last August, will be examined by three State psychiatrists under an order entered by Judge Elliott D. Marshall in Shenandoah County Circuit Court.

The sanity test will be conducted by Dr. Joseph E. Barrett, State hospital commissioner; Dr. Joseph R. Blalock, superintendent of Southwestern State Hospital, Marion, and Dr. James B. Pettie, superintendent of Western State Hospital, Staunton.

No date for the examination was specified in the order but presumably it will be made before the trial is scheduled to begin December 2.

Postmaster Exam Set

Emporia, Va., Nov. 17 (AP).—The Civil Service Commission has set December 15 as the deadline for receiving applications for competitive examinations to fill the position of postmaster of Emporia as successor to the late B. Port Awaits 169 Cars of 'Friendship'

New York, Nov. 17 (U.P.).—The cross-country trek of the Friendship Train, which has collected 169 carloads of gift food, was nearing its end today with 24 freight cars already in this port and two other train sections due tomorrow.

The food will be loaded aboard two ships, one due in France the day before Christmas and the other in Italy on New Year's Day.

It was estimated that the train will total 200 cars before the gifts are shipped out.

Gifts were pouring in from industrial and individual donors in the metropolitan area. On a single day as much as seven carloads of food, thousands of packages and $10,000 in cash were contributed here.

The project was launched by Newspaper Columnist Drew Pearson.

Shipbuilding Strike Ends on East Coast

Baltimore, Nov. 17 (AP).—The last chapter in the 143-day East Coast shipbuilding strike was reached today when union members at a local ship-scrapping yard voted unanimously to accept a tentative contract and return to work tomorrow.

Jack Gersson, acting regional director for the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America said picket lines at the Patapsco Scrap Yard, a Bethlehem Steel Co. subsidiary, would be withdrawn at midnight.

The yard's 900 workers walked off the job last June 26 with employes of two other local Bethlehom shipyards. The other two yards were covered by the Bethelhem master agreement reached November 8 and ratified the next day.

The terms of the tentative Iumswa-Patapsco agreement include a 6-cent-per-hour boost in wages.

Union Votes to Strike

Cincinnati, Nov. 17 (INS).—Approximately 4200 members of Local 100 of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen and Helpers Union (AFL) voted to strike tonight at midnight (EST) against 400 Cincinnati and suburban business concerns, the result of a wage dispute

Robey to Retire From Fairfax Democrat Post

George B. Robey, chairman of the Fairfax County Democratic executive committee for the last six years, will not seek reelection to the post.

Robey

Robey told The Washington Post last night, on the eve of the committee's annual business meeting, that he could not accept the chair if nominated "because of the pressure of private business." He will, however, seek election to the general committee.

The Democratic unit will meet at 8 o'clock tonight at the Fairfax Courthouse to elect 54 committeemen from a group of 60 candidates. Most of the present committee members are seeking reelection, and most are unopposed, with contests slated in only four of 23 precincts.

Immediately following the election of the committee, its members will elect officers for the new term, which becomes effective immediately, Robey said. Prominently mentioned as successor to Robey as chairman have been Burns N. Gibson and John A. K. Donovan, both of Falls Church. Neither has definitely announced his candidacy.

Robey has served three terms as chairman of the committee, and has been a comittee member for about 15 years. Beside being active in the Democratic Party, he is senior warden of Truro Parish, president of its men's club, a thirty-second degree Mason and a past worshipful master of the Henry Masonic Lodge.

Briggs Workers End Four-Day Strike

Detroit, Nov. 17 (INS).—Striking Briggs Manufacturing Co. employes voted in Detroit today to end their four-day strike and ordered union officials to negotiate the discharge of 30 workers.

About 3000 Briggs members of Local 742, UAW-CIO, staged a sympathy strike on Thursday when the 30 men were discharged for refusing to work because it was "too cold." The unauthorized walkout was called on the same day the UAW-CIO executive board in Atlantic City banned "wildcat strikes."

Virginia Considers Rail Plea For 10% Freight Rate Hike

Richmond, Va., Nov. 17 (AP).—The State Corporation Commission today took under advisement a petition by rail carriers operating in Virginia for a 10 per cent increase and charges on intrastate freight shipments.

The case was taken under advisement after the SCC had heard several hours of testimony both for and against the petition. The carriers' application also asked a rate increase of 10 cents per ton on a 2000 pound net ton for coal and 11 cents on a gross ton of 2240 pounds. Increases also were asked for transportation of iron ore.

Spokesmen for a half dozen railroads told the SCC that intrastate freight rate increases were necessary because of skyrocketing labor costs and operating and maintenance expenses.

Among the spokesmen for the roads were E. A. Anderson, Atlantic Coast Line, assistant comptroller at Wilmington, N. C.; W. J. G. Quinn of Washington, general statistician for the Southern Railway; Carl W. Dilli of Washington, assistant to freight traffic manager for the Southern; C. C. Wimmer of Portsmouth, Seaboard Airline assistant comptroller; Lee W. Thomas, president of Chesapeake Western Railway, Harrisonburg, and James W. Smith, accountant for the Chesapeake and Ohio.

The railroads' petition for an intrastate increase in freight rates and charges was filed with the State Corporation Commission several weeks ago.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

It Takes All Kinds (of Cabbies) To Make a World

The quickest way to find out what kind of guy is driving your cab is to call his attention to the fact that his hacker's license isn't displayed, as the law says it should be.

Sometimes the driver will sheepishly remove his "face" from the glove compartment, and explain that he forgot to post it when he came on duty.

Sometimes he'll produce it without a word; sometimes he'll thank you sincerely for calling the oversight to his attention—before it was noted by a policeman.

But sometimes he'll defiantly snarl "So what?"—and leave you wondering whether he actually has a license.

PIGEON ON THE GLASS, ALAS

Bert Whittington of 1756 K st. nw., reports that a pigeon recently flew through the open door of a Connecticut ave. liquor store, and parked himself on a bottle of 100 proof rye.

After surveying his surroundings critically for a few minutes, the pigeon departed as he had come, and flew off down the street.

MISCELLANY

Hal Feyling of 812 K st. se., reports that he has to stay home from work until his foot heals, and "that accounts for my writing to you so frequently lately." (I hope the habit stays with you after you're well again, Hal) . . . A. John Alexander of Arlington, Va., observes that The District Line ignores a couple of historical facts when it includes Arlington County in its domain. (Shucks, mister, The District Line already includes Texas—and I intend to indulge my imperialistic appetites as far as the mail edition of this paper will take me) . . . Mrs. Myra Stetson of 2209 S st. ne., sends me a clipping from the "Nippon Times" which indicates that American humor is the same the world over. The clipping is a classified ad which asks for information about a lost dog which is, "Black and brown, half-a-dog high and dog-and-a-half long."

OFF DAY

Sorry there's no cartoon today—Dave Groves was too lazy to draw one.

LAMB'S OWNER SHORN

A one-paragraph news item recently recorded the fact that a New York woman had complained to local police that her Persian lamb coat worth $500 was stolen from her hotel room.

Hank Hawkins of 4701 S. 7th st., Arlington, Va., gets the whole story into eight words: "Coat swiped; thief takes it on the lam."

SOMETHING NEW HAS BEEN SUBTRACTED

Following our recent item about the name of the Pentagon being changed to "National Defense Building," here's a more up-to-date report.

Road signs which formerly pointed the way to the Pentagon were subsequently changed to read: "National Defense Building."

Now painters have been assigned to obliterate the word "Building," leaving only "National Defense."

Are we to assume that they're changing back to "Pentagon" one word at a time?

ENGLISH SPOKEN HERE?

Mrs. Helmut Wakeham of 217 Monte Vista ave., Charlottesville, Va., has clipped and forwarded to me the following item from her local paper:

"Children's coats, $9.95. For girls with or without hoods."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Family of lovely kittens; they come from good rat-catching stock." (Republic 7839.)

"Female terrier, very well-mannered and intelligent." (Warfield 3717.)

ADD SIGNS

A most sensible contribution comes from John L. Wolarik of 1009 19th st. nw. He reports that Philadelphia cabs carry this reminder for their operators:

"You're a professional driver. Set a good example for the amateurs."

PERSONAL NOTES

Patsy Setler, Barton Heights, Orlean, Va., If I admit you're right, will you agree to a truce? (Please note the great restraint I display in not asking whether any of your ancestors were early Setlers.)

VAGRANT THOUGHT

Wonder why the local authorities don't do something about the sea of mud that's always present on the sidewalk of Minnesota ave. at C st. se?

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—At the Foreign Press Association dinner the other night, the only two men on the dais who weren't wearing black-tie were Vishinsky and his interpreter. Vishinsky's speech was a long one. He spoke on and on, and there was no applause. Then he whispered an aside to his interpreter, who announced: "Mr. Vishinsky says he will be finished soon." There was a burst of applause and laughter . . . Vishinsky whispered another aside, and his interpreter announced: "Mr. Vishinsky says that by laughing, you wasted one minute of his valuable time."

One night Louis Nizer and Atty. Gen. Tom Clark discussed Henry Wallace and the possibility of a third party. "I don't think there'll be a third party," Nizer assured Clark. "Third parties are just as popular in politics as in love."

Last week Judith Anderson told an interviewer, in commenting on "Medea": "Human beings still do these things. You still can read about them." The January issue of Harper's Bazaar will have an article, "Medea in Modern Dress," Dr. Fredric Wertham's psychoanalytic study of a recent murder case.

Gregory Ratoff, now making a movie in Rome, is the one who in studying film-production costs he deemed prohibitive, said: "Moving pictures were invented by Reds to destroy capitalism."

The Hollywood contingent sailing on the Queen Mary for a Command Performance numbers 27 people. Only five of them are stars; the others are studio assistants, writers, etc. The cost of the trip is shared by all the studios. In London the stars will be joined by British and other American stars. The event last year raised $175,000 for charities . . .

Each Hollywood studio submitted one picture to a group of British and American film judges who selected the one they deemed best. This year they chose Sam Goldwyn's "The Bishop's Wife." All eight films were allowed to be imported under bond, tax free.

A gang of teen-age marauders is operating in the West 80's section of Central Park . . .

Arthur Hopkins and Guy Bolton won a bet from a Harvard Club member at the Gamecock Cafe, a bet that the cafe is exactly midway between the Yale Club and the Harvard Club. They remembered that the distance once was measured with a yardstick by the loser of a football bet.

This is the story told years ago of Princess Elizabeth, the bride-to-be. She was riding with her grandmother, Queen Mary, and when the car stopped for a red light, a flower vendor tossed a corsage to her and said: "Flowers for the little lady" . . . The youngster stated: "But I am a Princess" . . . "Everybody knows that." Queen Mary told her, "but we're trying to bring you up to be a little lady."

THICKER HAIR WITHIN 6 MONTHS!
—with treatments that are pleasant as a shampoo!

R. W. Farrell, Trichologist

Just think of it! Persons accepted for treatment can be absolutely sure of wonderful thicker hair within only 6 months! Think what a difference in your appearance. Think what a worry off your mind! And treatments are so pleasant, too. No greasy salves. No sticky ointments. No foul-smelling chemicals. HAIR EXPERTS' scientific treatments are clean and refreshing as a shampoo!

Yes I take the short, weak "fuzz" of the cases accepted for treatment and stimulate it so that within six months it is replaced with strong hair on its way to normal healthy growth.

OUT Go the "Hair-Killers"!

A thicker head of hair for you calls for two things: First, we must clean out the hair-ravaging forces in your scalp. Second, we must revive the scalp's natural urge to produce hair (remember, you can't stop a normal healthy scalp from growing abundant hair!). Imbedded dandruff and bacteria swarms beneath the scalp must be routed. The hair-destroying "bottle bacillus" pityrosporum ovale, must be fought. Clogged hair-passages must be reopened. "Sleeping Blood Circulation" must be awakened, and roused to hair-growing activity.

Thicker Hair for a Lifetime!

To accomplish these results, we use new Vigo-Liquids. Special Scalp Germicidals, and HAIR EXPERTS' exclusive "Two-Way Stimulation" technique. Once your scalp has been revived to hair-growing activity, you follow the simple professional Rules of Scalp Hygiene which we teach you and you can confidently expect to maintain your thicker, healthier, better-looking hair for life!

Your Hair Is a Priceless Asset! Don't Gamble—See Us at Once

We urge you, please do not delay—Follicle Shrinkage might set in, virtually wrecking your hopes! Do as thousands of smart, modern, up-to-date people are doing—take hair treatments! You'll actually enjoy HAIR EXPERTS' brisk "scalp workouts"—administered by friendly attendants in cheery private offices. Clip out our phone number and address now and phone or come in today. Let's get acquainted, and let's get started!

Food Train Symbol of Generosity

By Drew Pearson

Aboard the Friendship Train.—This train, two sections strong, pulled into New York today, just as a reluctant Congress knuckles down to the problems of the emergency in Europe.

Pearson

Just one month and a week after the idea of a friendship train was first mentioned—October 11—the American people have not only organized this train but hooked onto it around 150 boxcars as a token of how they feel about aid and friendship with Europe.

A couple of months ago, when the President started talking to congressional leaders about a special session of Congress, they contended that it would take a month or more to organize the reports on Europe from the various congressional committees studying abroad.

But in the brief interim since, an important segment of the American people—a sample cross section of the continent from coast to coast—has gone out and shown what they thought about aid to Europe by doing something about it, not merely talking about it. The boxcars of food they loaded up should reach France and Italy by Christmas or New Year's even while some Congressmen are still debating; also when the food pinch abroad is beginning to be felt hardest.

When the Friendship Train pulls into New York, most people won't be able to see it. New York is built that way. Passenger trains come in underground, while freight trains go around to New Jersey.

Generosity and Teamwork

Therefore the people at the Atlantic Coast end of the line may not realize the effort, generosity and teamwork that went into this symbol of American friendship. They may not know, for instance, that the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen on the New York Central lines east of Buffalo volunteered their services to operate the train; so also did the train crew on the Union Pacific; or that at Spencer, Iowa, a freight train on the Milwaukee road stopped opposite radio station KICD while the train crew trudged through the snow to the radio station to contribute to the Friendship Train.

Most people know the railroads carried this train free but they have no conception of the painstaking detail worked out by the roads in collecting boxcars, getting then hooked on in time, and getting this train moving across the continent in 11 days.

Most people know that an enthusiastic parade gave the train a rousing sendoff in Los Angeles. But they do not know that Musicians Local 47 contributed eight 40-piece bands for that parade—free. Nor do they know how the teamsters' union locals in many cities furnished men to load and pack boxcars; or how the Hershey Chocolate Co. started a boxcar of sugar by boat from Cuba on the same day the Friendship Train left Los Angeles in order to meet the train in New York; or how the little town of Sidney, Nebr., population 4000, rolled up two full carloads of wheat—twice as many as Omaha, with a population of a quarter of a million.

It was the small towns of America which, without seeking credit, made some of the most amazing contributions — Julesburg, Colo., one car of wheat, though not on the line of the train; Gering, Nebr., 1000 bags of dried beans; Beatrice, Nebr.; Tulare, S. Dak.; Marshalltown, Iowa; Manitowac County, Wis., far off the main line of the train, with one car of condensed milk; the Farmers Union grain terminal at St. Paul with one car of special Seminola flour, of which spaghetti is made.

Friendship Surmounts Isolationism

Some people thought that when the friendship train hit the so-called isolationist Middle West, its reception would be lukewarm, even frigid. But the opposite proved true. All through Nebraska—North Platte, Kearney, Grand Island, Fremont—enthusiastic crowds celebrated the loading of bulging boxcars as their token of friendship. They were interested in two things: one, that their aid went direct to the people of Europe; and two, that food builds for friendlier human relations with the rest of the world.

Then on across Iowa, and up through Illinois and Indiana—the score of boxcars kept mounting. Council Bluffs, Iowa; Boone, Ames, Cedar Rapids—with seven big boxcars of rolled oats—Clinton and Davenport, until Iowa had rolled up the biggest total of all. Then Sterling, Ill., supposed to be in the heart of the Chicago Tribune's isolationist area, but which hooked two cars onto the friendship train.

In Iowa, two farmers came aboard—L. C. Peterson of Stanton, and Otis Tuttle of Norway. They had joined 20 other Iowa farmers in paying their own way to Europe last summer to see what the food situation was like. It was one of this group who, when GOP Congressman John Taber of New York, said he had seen no hunger in Europe, shot back: "Yes, I saw no signs of hunger in Europe—around the big hotels."

Keep Busy

Of all the angles of this life . . . The least inviting side . . . Is not to have enough to do . . . to keep us occupied . . . Because excessive idleness . . . Is time unwisely spent . . . And it is bound to bother us . . . And make us discontent . . . We look around for anything . . . To fill our lazy mind . . . And usually we tell ourselves . . . To take the foolish kind . . . Our apathy to progress is . . . A seed that grows and grows . . . Until we spend all energy . . . And multiply our woes . . . An idle hand is dangerous . . . And one we cannot hide . . . And so the only answer is . . . To keep it occupied.

THE HECHT CO. MEN'S STORE IS READY

For Your Knight Before Christmas!

A lady knocked her esquire cold

With gifts of armour (suit of tin)

Accessories that made a din!

The knight today has different slants

He likes good slacks and scorns iron pants!

You buy him jewelry, handsome gloves,

A lady finds these gifts galore

For Christmas "knight" in our Men's Store.

See The Hecht Co. "FUN AND FANCY FREE" WINDOWS when you're downtown, they're terrific! See Walt Disney's new fantasy, currently showing at the RKO Keith Theatre. The "cast" performs daily in our "F" Street windows!
